CLASSIFICATION OF MUSICAL FORMS.

RULES OF PRONUNCIATION.

PREFACE.

THE book herewith offered the musical public has one aim, which is utility—practical use. While there is already a considerable number of small dictionaries, the publishers of the present work believe that there is still room for another, which, as far as possible, should combine the advantages of all the best ones and avoid their prominent defects, such as obsolete and often incorrect phraseology, reduplication of terms, redundancy of obsolete terms, and the like. Accordingly, the work was committed to the present editors, who have agreed upon the selection of terms and information following. Its special points of usefulness are these:

1. The vocabulary, while not so large as two others, is more complete and modern, aggregating nearly 10,000 terms.

2. The definitions have been amended where necessary, and some hundreds of important topics have been entirely rewritten, such as Accent, Consonance, Dissonance, Temperament, and the like.

3. Pronunciations have been affixed to all terms from foreign languages. These are very necessary by reason of the totally different principles of pronunciation which govern terms from the French, German and Italian respectively. The pronunciations are approximate only, but they will be found of great assistance.

4. At the beginning, in place of an Introduction, we have placed a general view of Musical Notation, not alone the topics which ordinarily are included under that head, but also those rarer matters of the signs employed in different departments of manuscript music and score-writing. As far as we have been able to collect them, this summary includes every sign liable to be met with by the student, no matter in what department he may work.

5. At one point the work is not consistent with itself. In several of the small works now before the public, long lists of terms are found beginning with the German article die, a principle of lexicography as false as would be the inclusion of a series of phrases in an English dictionary beginning with "the". Accordingly these have been relegated to their proper places, under their leading terms. In other cases, however, entire phrases have been included under their leading word, such as those beginning with Allegro, Andante, etc., because these combinations are of constant occurrence, and the complex term possesses an individual significance which is not in all cases exactly the same as the sum of its elements.

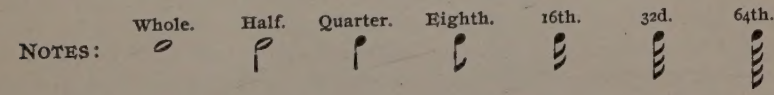
6. A large amount of editing has been devoted to rectifying the faulty phraseology of former definitions. We cannot hope to have fully succeeded at this point. Careless habits of speech (and of thought as well) retain in colloquial use such erroneous expressions as "note" for tone, "bar" for measure, "time" for measure, "tone" and "semitone" as names of interval, and the like, until scientific musicians pass over such expressions without noticing their defective and misleading form. It is altogether likely that many such examples still remain in the present volume, despite the care that has been taken to remove them.

SUMMARY OF MUSICAL NOTATION.

In writing a piece of music which he has imagined or worked out at the instrument, the composer has mainly to do with two elements in it, the Pitch and the Time. The Expression and Tone-color he leaves for mere suggestion, by means of an occasional p., f., sf., or other incidental mark. Here almost everything is left to the intelligence of the interpretative artist. But in the two provinces first mentioned this is not the case. Everything is set down with exactness. The number and recurrence of tones, their ordering into pulsation and measure, their various relations in pitch, as melody and harmony, all are fully and finally determined. Hence a clear understanding of these parts of musical notation is of the utmost importance to the student, since without it he will never arrive at an exact comprehension of the composer's intention.

NOTATION OF TIME AND METER.

The distinctive sign of musical tone is a character called a Note, which consists essentially of a round or oval head, with or without a stem downward or upward from it.



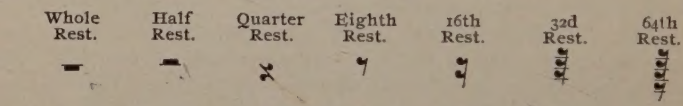
There is also a note called a Breve, equal to two Whole notes. This is obsolete in modern music, but occasionally it is found in old music.

A Note indicates Musical utterance, as distinguished from any other kind of utterance. The forms of the notes indicate relative duration. The duration-values correspond to the names given above.

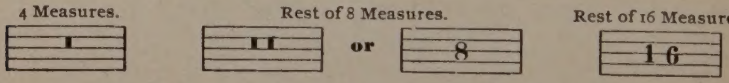
A dot after a note adds one half to its value. A second dot adds half as much as the first. Hence two dots add three fourths to the value of the note.

RESTS.

A Rest is a musical silence, or a rhythmic silence. By this is meant that whereas the term rest in general means merely a cessation from activity, a musical rest indicates a temporary cessation from musical activity while the idea of the music is still going on. A musical rest is a silence during a certain compass of musical time; i. e., of Rhythm, or Meter. Hence, during rests, the musician is conscious of the rhythmic pulsation and meter. This is the distinction between a musical rest and rest in general. The characters indicating musical rest are also called Rests. They are of forms and denominations corresponding to the notes. Dots are applied to them in the same way as to notes.



A rest of several measures in succession is generally indicated by one of the forms of rest following, together with the figures indicating the length of rest desired, written above the staff.



RHYTHMIC PULSATION AND MEASURE NOTATION.

The first step towards music is the recurrence of rhythmic pulsation. All music moves rhythmically, by pulsations of equal value, which are grouped into measures by means of accents. Measures are of two, three, four, six, nine, or twelve pulsations each, and all alike have the strong pulse at beginning. The place of this pulsation is indicated by means of a line across the staff, called a Bar. The strong accent falls upon the tone or time-space immediately following it. Accent is indicated also by means of a little angle >. In the following examples of measure-forms the accent mark is unnecessary, but is placed there for the guidance of the student. The mere bar, without the extra mark, means exactly the same thing. The bar always shows the place of the strong accent.

MEASURE SIGNATURE.

At the beginning of every piece or movement is placed a Measure Signature, consisting of two figures in the form of a fraction, immediately following the clef. The upper figure denotes the number of pulsations in a measure.

The lower figure tells what kind of note is taken to represent one unit of time. All other notes in the piece are computed with reference to this. The time within the measure may be occupied in any manner the composer pleases. One tone may be prolonged through the entire measure; or every pulse may be subdivided into several parts. All that the measure signature requires is that the unit note or its value shall be present in each pulsation of the measure according to the tables of note-values preceding.

The unit note is generally a quarter or eighth; less frequently a half-note; least often of all a sixteenth or other shorter note.

Now, since the measures run from two pulsations to three, four, six, nine and twelve, each signature appears in several different forms, such as a half-note unit with two, three, four, etc., pulsations; a quarter-note unit with all the varieties of measures, etc. Hence the following forms:

$\frac{2}{1}$ $\frac{3}{1}$ $\frac{4}{1}$ A whole-note unit, and two, three, or four pulsations in a measure.

In all of these forms the value of every note is computed in beats, reckoning from the whole note as one beat.

$\frac{2}{2}$ or ¢ $\frac{3}{2}$ $\frac{4}{2}$ $\frac{6}{2}$

In all these forms the unit is a half note, and all other note forms are computed from that.

$\frac{2}{4}$ $\frac{3}{4}$ $\frac{4}{4}$ or C $\frac{6}{4}$ $\frac{9}{4}$ $\frac{12}{4}$

In all these forms the unit is a quarter, and this is the measure-note from which all are computed.

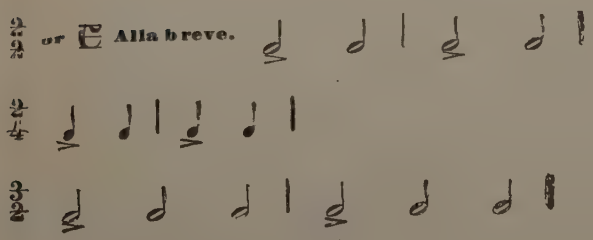
$\binom{2}{8}$ $\frac{3}{8}$ $\binom{4}{8}$ $\frac{6}{8}$ $\frac{9}{8}$ $\frac{12}{8}$

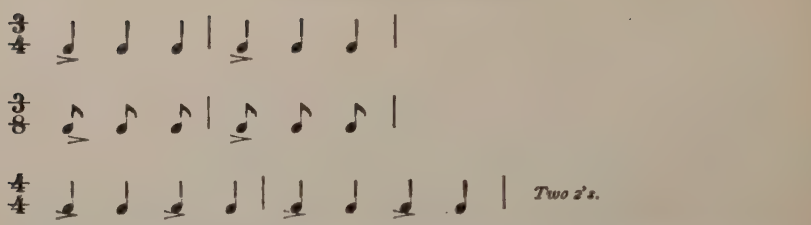
In these forms the measure-note is an eighth, and all forms are computed from that.

$\frac{3}{16}$ $\frac{4}{16}$ $\frac{6}{16}$ etc.

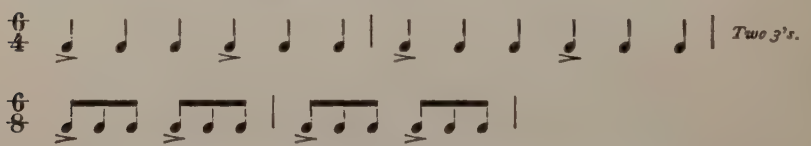
In these forms the measure-note is a sixteenth.

MEASURE FORMS.

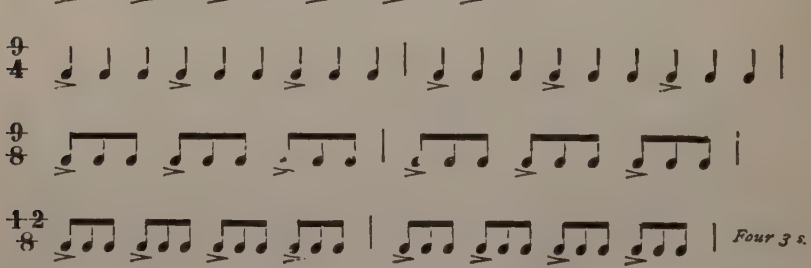




All measures having more than three pulsations are grouped within themselves into twos or threes, thus requiring smaller accents, as indicated approximately in the examples following:



NOTE.—6-8 measure is not at all the same as six-eights derived from 3-4 measure. The latter is accented as three groups of two:



THE NOTATION OF PITCH.

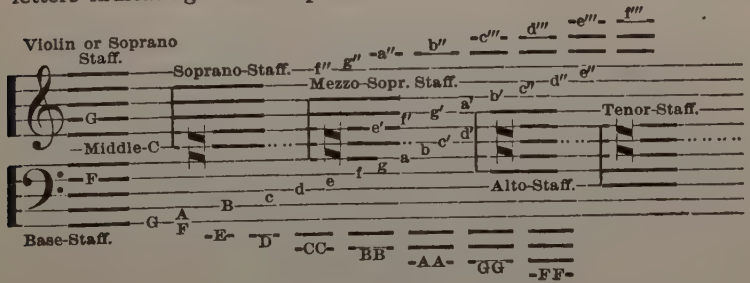
Musical pitch is noted by means of lines and spaces, grouped into convenient systems called staves, or a staff. In modern music the staff consists of five lines and the appertaining spaces, which number six (those above and below the lines being included). Each of these lines and spaces is called a degree of the staff, and represents a degree of the scale. Therefore, five lines, with the six appertaining spaces, afford places for eleven scale degrees. When more are wanted, short additional lines (called added lines) are written above or below. When these become excessive, the same are repeated with the expression 8vo above or below. The former indicates that the octave above is intended; the latter, the octave below.

Pianoforte music generally employs two such systems of lines, one for the notes to be played by each hand. Organ music employs three staves, the part for the feet requiring an additional staff. Orchestral scores employ as many staves as there are instruments employed. These different staves are distinguished from each other by means of special designations, and by characters called Clefs, or keys. The clefs in use are three in form, and six in variety, according to the manner of applying them. First comes the treble, or G Clef, indicating the place of G above middle C. This is used for the right-hand parts in piano and organ music, the violin, oboe, flute, and instruments of high pitch. The bass, or F Clef, indicates the place of F below middle C. It is used for the basses. The C Clef indicates middle C. It is applied in several different manners.

The following diagram shows the great staff of eleven lines (the line of middle C in the center), with the different clefs applied to the selection of five lines which they serve to identify.

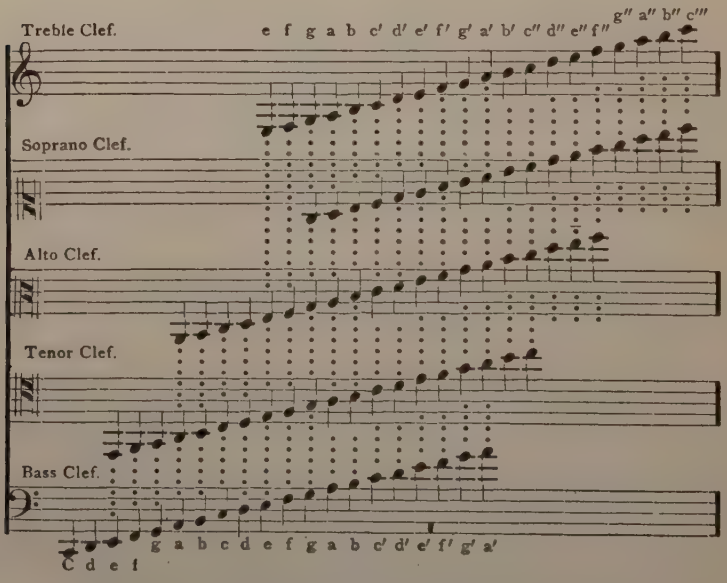
GREAT STAFF OF ELEVEN LINES,

Showing the relation and pitch of the various Clefs and Staves used in Pianoforte and Vocal Music, and in Orchestral Scores; together with the letters indicating absolute pitch.



Very high tones, requiring many added lines to properly indicate, are sometimes written an octave lower, with an 8va over them to show that the passage is to be played an octave higher.

The equivalence of the different clefs is also shown by the following figure, in which the notes which are identical are connected by dotted lines.



These different clefs, although at first confusing to the student of theory, are later a convenience, since they permit him to represent almost any melody without running off the staff and requiring the addition of added lines.

The staff as above represented may be taken as equivalent to the white keys of the pianoforte, each line and space standing for the tone made by a single key.

NOTATION OF TONES IN KEY.

The staff is adjusted to the representation of the chromatic tones, and the black keys, by means of characters called sharps ♯, flats ♭, and naturals ♮. The sharp, placed upon a staff degree, indicates the next higher tone in the chromatic scale. The flat, the next chromatic tone lower. The natural cancels the flat or sharp, and in certain cases effects adjustments equivalent to either of the former.

Thus, a sharp upon the staff-degree G, indicates G-sharp; upon A, A-sharp, etc.

A flat upon A, indicates A-flat; upon B, B-flat, etc.

A natural upon A-sharp, indicates A; upon B-flat, B, etc.

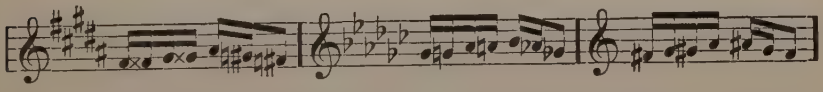
Double sharps × and double flats ♭♭ are also employed when needed. These indicate a chromatic change of an entire whole step upwards or downwards from the unaffected degree. A double sharp upon A, indicates A-double-sharp, which is enharmonic with B-natural. A-double-flat is equivalent to G-natural, and so on. The double sharps and double flats are employed for indicating chromatic tones in pieces where single sharps or flats are already in use. Thus, to the ear the following two series of tones are not different.

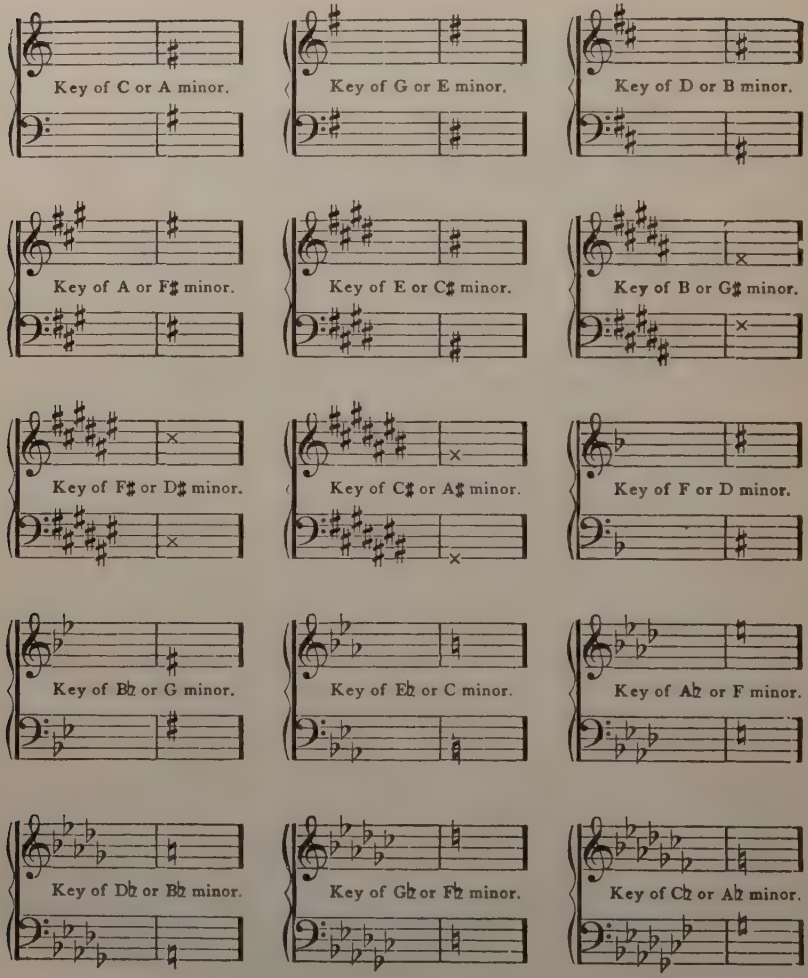


Chromatic signs affect the staff degree upon which they are placed throughout the measure in which they occur, and no further. They affect only the degree upon which they are placed, and not the octaves, except when used as Signatures, in which case they affect not only the degrees to which they are applied, but all octaves of them upon the same staff.

SIGNATURES.

By Signature is meant sharps or flats written after the clef to indicate the adjustment of the staff to key. In this way is indicated whatever modification from the plain staff the key may require, except in the case of the minor mode, which generally requires an accidental sharp or natural upon its seventh degree. Hence, in the following table of signatures, and the names of the staff degrees under them, the minor modes are also shown with this accidental.

Signatures of the Keys, and Relative Minors.



Key of C or A minor.
Key of G or E minor.
Key of D or B minor.
Key of A or F♯ minor.
Key of E or C♯ minor.
Key of B or G♯ minor.
Key of F♯ or D♯ minor.
Key of C♯ or A♯ minor.
Key of F or D minor.
Key of B♭ or G minor.
Key of E♭ or C minor.
Key of A♭ or F minor.
Key of D♭ or B♭ minor.
Key of G♭ or F♭ minor.
Key of C♭ or A♭ minor.

NOTE.—The occurrence of the characteristic accidental above, with a given signature, generally indicates the minor key named.

TONES IN KEY. OTHER NOTATIONS.

The Tonic Sol-fa notation consists of the initials of the scale names of tones written in a horizontal line. Digressions into a higher or lower octave are indicated by a short tick above or below the initial. The key is indicated by a direction at beginning.

The bars indicate measure beginnings, and the colons the beats. As many tones are sung in one beat as are represented within the time-space devoted to it. Prolongation of tone is indicated by a — in the spaces through which the tone is to be prolonged. Rests are indicated by leaving the time-space vacant. Example:

PATENT NOTES.

SOMETIMES CALLED BUCKWHEAT NOTES.

This is a staff notation, much used in the South, with note-heads of peculiar form, indicating the key-name of the tone. All the staff notation (including signatures) is employed, and the characteristic shapes of the note-head additionally.

Do, Ray, Me, Faw, Sol, Law, Se, Do.

SIGNS APPERTAINING TO EXPRESSION AND INTERPRETATION.—MELODIC EMBELLISHMENTS.

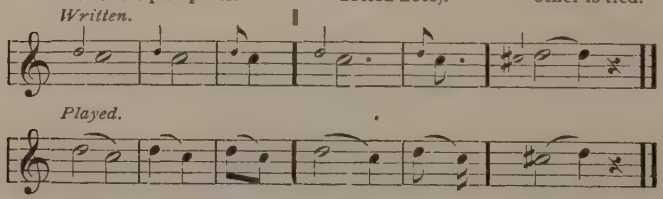
THE LONG APPOGGIATURA.

This embellishment consists of a grace note which takes half (a), two-thirds (b), or even the whole (c), of the time of its principal, as shown in the examples following:

a. Long appoggiatura before a note which can be divided into two equal parts.

b. Before a note divisible by three (a dotted note).

c. Before a note to which another is tied.



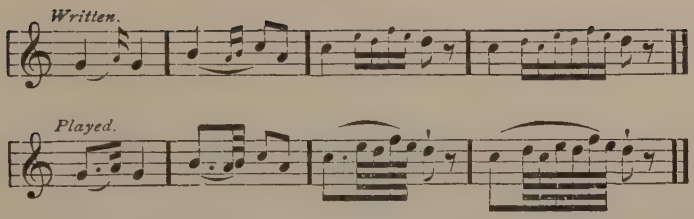
The long appoggiatura is now usually written out in full in large notes.

THE SHORT APPOGGIATURA.

The short appoggiatura is a grace note with a little stroke through its stem. It begins at the time of the principal note, and is played as quickly as possible—(a, b, c.)

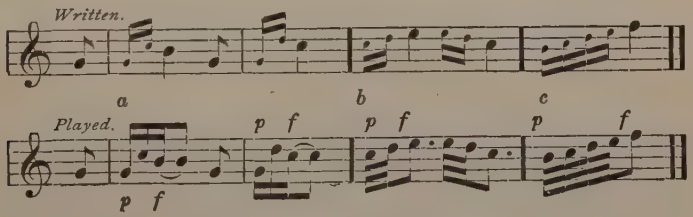
AFTER NOTES.

After notes consist of one or more grace notes introduced as passing or changing notes, in passing from one melody note to another. They are generally connected with their principal note by a slur, and never fall on an accent.



DOUBLE APPOGGIATURAS.

Double appoggiaturas consist of two grace notes preceding a melody note. They begin at the proper time of the principal note (and therefore with the corresponding Base note), and are played as quickly as possible, the accent falling on the principal note.

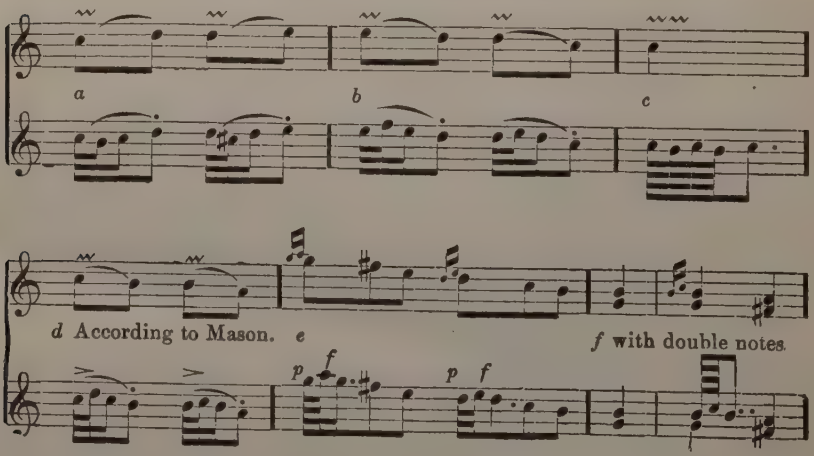


THE TURN, OR GRUPETTO.

The turn consists of a principal note and two auxiliary notes, above and below respectively, which may be a whole step or a half step distant from the principal. Generally, the upper auxiliary is the next tone above in the same key, and the lower a semitone below the principal. When the upper auxiliary is only a semitone above the principal, as in the case of turns on the 3d and 7th degree of the scale, the lower auxiliary is played diatonic, and consequently a whole step below the principal, in order to avoid the misleading chromatic effect which would otherwise be produced. On the 5th degree of the minor scale the lower auxiliary is played chromatic. The turn usually comes at the close of the principal note, as at a, b, and c, in the examples, where also is illustrated the use of accidentals in connection with the turn-sign. Sometimes, however, it comes at the beginning of a note, as at d, in which case the turn-sign stands directly over it. With dotted notes the turn comes between the note and the dot, as shown at e and f.

THE MORDENT AND BOUNDING TRILL.

These two embellishments are precisely alike, except that one is made with the note below the principal, and the other with the note above. The first is distinguished by the vertical stroke through the sign, as at a, below. The other, also called Mordent by some, and Prall Trill or "Bounding Trill" by others, lacks the vertical stroke through the sign, and is made with the note above. The same embellishment is sometimes written out in small notes, as at e. The Prall Trill should be accented on the first note, as at d. In all cases the embellishment is to be played as rapidly as possible.



THE TRILL.

The trill consists of a rapid vibration or alternation of a principal note and the next above in the same key. A vocal trill should begin somewhat deliberately, but immediately become rapid, as shown at a below. It concludes with a turn, which, however, may sometimes be omitted in chain trills. On the pianoforte a long trill, accompanied by a melody in the same hand, may omit the auxiliary note at the moment of sounding the melody, in order to facilitate the passage, as shown at d. It is of the greatest importance that the notes of the trill should be of equal power. At the start the auxiliary may be accented. Trills should vibrate at a uniform speed, after the motion is once established, and in some definite ratio to the time of the passage.

The trill begins with the principal note, and not with the auxiliary, although the contrary has been taught by eminent masters, and is sometimes required by a grace note, as at b and c below.

THE PEDALS OF THE PIANOFORTE.

Modern pianofortes sometimes have two and sometimes three pedals. That upon the right is the Damper pedal. (There is no such thing as a loud pedal.)

It is indicated by the abbreviation Ped., and the termination of its use by ✻ or ⊕.

In some old music (printed between 1830 and 1850) the use of the pedal is indicated by the character ⊕. This is now obsolete.

Mr. Arthur Foote has proposed the following mark, which indicates that the pedal is to be pressed at the beginning of the line and discontinued at the precise point where the line terminates:

The left-hand pedal is called the Soft pedal, and its office is to reduce the volume of sound. Upon upright pianos it does this by bringing the hammers nearer the strings. Upon grand pianos, by shifting the hammers so that they do not strike all the strings of the unison. Hence the origin of the term Una Corda, for indicating that the soft pedal should be pressed by the left foot. The term Tre Corda indicates its discontinuance. Occasionally these terms are abbreviated to U. C. and T. C., but as a rule they are written out in full.

When there are three pedals the middle one is generally a tone-sustaining pedal. This is a modification of the damper pedal, prolonging whatever tones are actually sounding at the moment when the tone-sustaining pedal is pressed. Meanwhile, others can be taken and left to any extent, the original tone or chord remaining sounding until the vibration of the strings dies away, or until the tone-sustaining pedal is dismissed. There is no mark as yet for this pedal. Its use is advisable in places where there are tones to be prolonged, but where confusion arises from the ordinary damper pedal.

INDICATIONS OF PHRASING AND FORM.

The Slur is a curved line drawn over or under several notes, indicating that they are to be closely connected in performance; or that they form a single idea, although the idea itself may contain several smaller ideas

Cross slur points indicate that the note under them belongs to two ideas, being the end of one and the beginning of the other.

Dots, or pointed specs, over notes indicate Staccato quality. Tones so indicated are disconnected more or less according to the nature of the passage. In older music the dots were sometimes considered to indicate a duration equal to half the value of the notes; and the specs a duration equal to a quarter of the apparent value of the notes. In modern music no distinction of this kind exists.

Short lines over notes indicate emphasis and individuality, occasionally a slight prolonging.

Short lines with a dot, or dots and slur together, indicate a less degree of staccato than the dots alone. Generally considered to equal three fourths of the value of the notes.

v Sometimes used to indicate the end of a formal phrase, in pieces edited for elementary instruction. It does not necessarily require separation between the tones, but is intended solely as an aid to the eye in dividing the passage into its constituent parts.

‖ | or | ‖ These are called "reading marks," and indicate the boundaries of subordinate motives. No separation of tones is indicated by these marks. They are solely for aiding the eye.

$\overset{2}{V}$ $\overset{3}{V}$ Placed over a bar indicates the strong accent of the great meter, consisting of three or two measures, according to the figure above the little angle.

⌒ Rubato, sometimes employed to indicate a slight emphasis and prolonging of the tone, particularly in suspensions.

, Comma, sometimes indicates a breathing interruption in the flow of tone, similar to that made in melody by the singer taking breath.

HS. Hauptsatz, Headpiece, or Principal Subject.

SS. Seitensatz, Sidepiece, or Second Subject.

SCHLS. Schlusssatz, Closingpiece, or Conclusion.

ZWS. Zwischensatz, Betweenpiece, or Connecting Part, or Interlude.

MS. Mittelsatz, Middlepiece, or Middle Subject. Often found in the sonatas of Mozart directly after the double bar in the principal movement.

rnfz. Rinforzando. Several tones in succession very forcible.

fp. One tone, or chord, forte, all the rest piano.

Legato. All the tones connected.

Every tone emphasized, individualized, and slightly separated.

Every tone strongly individualized.

Sometimes used as breathing mark in solfeggi, and in music for wood wind.

Tenuto. Hold the tone its full value.

COMPLETE CLASSIFICATION OF THE MUSICAL FORMS.

THE ELEMENTARY FORMS.

Figure, a musical idea of recognizable peculiarities. In order to embody an idea a tone-succession must possess the following elements: 1, a definite motion and compass in rhythm, extending from some one point in measure to the corresponding point in the next pulsation, measure, or the next measure but one; 2, a melodic figure with a point of accent or emphasis; and 3, a chord-foundation suggested or expressed. In developing a musical idea into larger forms a composer takes one of two courses: Either he retains the rhythm of the motive and modifies the harmony and melody (thematic development), or he retains the harmony and the essential features of the melody and modifies the rhythm (variation).

Motive, a musical idea, taken as a germ or pattern for development. The natural compass of a motive is one measure, which may be from any point within the measure to the corresponding point in the next. A Motive may be a fraction of a measure; or it may run to two measures.

Phrase, a musical symmetry, consisting of two motives, or one motive repeated or sequenced. The natural compass of a Phrase is two measures. But it may extend only to one measure, or be carried to four, or under certain circumstances to a larger number of measures.

Section, a musical symmetry, composed of two phrases. Its natural compass is four measures, but it may be carried to eight. Sections are of two general types: Antecedents, which propose a subject, and Consequents, which answer and complete an Antecedent. These divisions correspond to subjects and predicates in logic.

Period, a completed musical idea, consisting of two sections which answer each other. A Period is like a stanza. Its four phrases may rhyme with each other in almost any manner the composer pleases. Periods arising from motives of a part of a measure might not exceed four measures in compass; and those arising from motives of two measures would naturally reach sixteen measures. Still further variations occur in period-forms through the repetition of some one phrase, or motive, the avoidance or postponement of a cadence, and the like. Periods are to be distinguished also with reference to their character as dependent and independent. A dependent period requires something else to finish it; or devotes itself to finishing something already proposed. Hence a dependent period is either a Consequent of some former antecedent, or the Antecedent of a consequent to occur later. The external indication of dependence in period-forms is the cadence, which, if upon the tonic of the original key, indicates that the period is closed in that direction, at least. If also the period begins in its principal key, it may be taken as independent. But if it begins in some key or chord other than the tonic, there is something implied before it, which may be found in the previous period, or may be merely mental with the composer. Of the latter kind the beginning of the Beethoven sonata, opus 111, may be taken as type.

Period-Group, a succession of periods, which may be developed from the same motives, or may serve as connecting links in a larger work. In the former case the group assumes an independent form, and the Song-form is the result. In the latter case we have modulating periods, passages, and the like.

INDEPENDENT MUSICAL FORMS.

Unitary Forms, containing but one single melodic subject. The simplest type of unitary form is the One-period Song-form, of which the ordinary church tune affords a convenient example. The Two-period Song-form consists of two periods, of which the second is the consequent and complement of the first. The Three-period Song-form consists of three periods, in which the second period is usually in a different key, while the third period is nearly or quite the same as the first. Here we have in miniature a rondo, in which an original subject is brought back again after a digression. The Song-form is the general foundation of all dances, and most popular music, and it furnishes the principal subjects of the slow movements in the classic authors.

The Fugue is a unitary form entirely developed out of a single melodic subject, but its compass is so much extended by the harmonic and contrapuntal transformation of the original subject that the piece, as a whole, often reaches proportions almost symphonic, as in the great organ fugues of Bach.

Variations are also unitary forms, in that they treat of the same melody all through. The original theme in this case is the form, usually a song-form of one or two or three periods. The variations in succession illustrate contrasted manners of treatment, and in their relative order they finally combine to constitute a large form, somewhat suggestive of a rondo or sonata.

An Etude is a thematic composition designed to illustrate some difficulty or artistic effect. Occasionally it is of binary order, but generally it is unitary, having but a single subject. The etudes of Chopin illustrate artistic studies in musical effect; and those of Cramer and Clementi those designed for technical purposes.

Canon is a musical form in which one or more voices follow after a leading voice, called the antecedent, singing precisely the same melody. A round is a common example of this form. The canons of Schumann are also good examples.

Canonic Imitation is imitation in the manner of canon, and this art underlies all modern thematic development.

Binary Forms are those in which there are two contrasting melodic subjects, each of which may be, and generally is, a complete song-form of one, two or three periods. The first subject is called the Principal, and when it is repeated it is always in the same key, and generally nearly or quite unchanged, although in some instances it is shortened. The second subject is called Second, and is in a related key to the principal key of the piece. Opinions and practices differ with reference to the relation which should prevail between a Principal and Second, as to tonality. In general, however, in the older practice the Second of a major Principal was in the dominant; and the Second of a minor Principal was in the relative major. Chopin made a very bold departure from this practice when, in his E minor concerto, after a Principal in E minor he introduced a second in E major. The effect is very pleasing.

A Trio is a second subject somewhat milder than the Principal with which it is associated. According to classical practice the trio of a major Principal was in the subdominant, or in the relative minor. These rules are no longer obligatory.

Many slow movements of the sonatas and symphonies of Beethoven are binary forms, with a certain amount of passage or modulating work between the Principal and Second. Such movements are concluded with a Coda, or conclusion, and approach the form of the rondo.

A Rondo is a musical form in which a Principal is relieved by a Second and perhaps a Third, the Principal returning from three to five times, with the introduction of more or less connecting matter. This form is more generally a ternary order, wherefore it will be more fully discussed in the next paragraph.

Toccata is a style rather than a form. A Toccata is generally a sort of etude, characterized by rapid motion and brilliancy of effect. Toccatas are generally unitary as to form, but occasionally binary.

Ternary Forms are those in which, besides a Principal and Second, there is also a Third. When three subjects have to be related in this manner, the Second was originally in the dominant or the principal key, or in some key upon the dominant side; while the Third was in the subdominant or in some key upon that side. These rules are no longer followed exactly. The composer is free to follow his fancy, and to place his new subject in any possible key which he conceives best suited to bring out its nature, when taken in connection with the matter and tonality of the accompanying subjects.

The most characteristic of the ternary forms is the Rondo, which is defined above. Rondo means round, and the frequent return of the Principal is the characteristic trait of this form. The Rondo is primarily lyric in its spirit, and by preference is of a semi-jovial character, wherefore it is never applied to serious purposes; or, if its essential round principle is availed of in more serious forms, the jovial rondo spirit is carefully eliminated. The Berlin theorist, Adolph Bernhardt Marx, was the first to apply the term rondo to slow movements. He called the Adagio of Sonata Pathetique a rondo, which in the return of the Principal it is; but not in spirit of the movement.

The Sonata-Piece is the most conspicuous example of the ternary form. A sonata-piece consists essentially of a Principal, some connecting matter, a Second, and a Conclusion. Here there is a repetition, after which comes a middle part, called an Elaboration, devoted to free fantasia upon the principal themes of the work; after the Elaboration, the first part (Principal, Second, and Conclusion) returns entire, except that the Second is always in the principal key of the work, and the Conclusion is somewhat extended, though this latter is not obligatory. In the older sonata pieces the Principal and the Second are so much more important than the Conclusion that the careless observer may not be inclined to attach much importance to them. The Conclusion, however, is an essential part of this form. The Sonata-Piece is the type of all serious instrumental composition. It forms the principal movement or movements in sonatas and symphonies (including all chamber quartettes and larger works), and many overtures and other works also form themselves upon its general principles.

Complex Forms are forms consisting of two, three, four, or even five, shorter forms, each of which is an independent piece; but all are associated into one Complex form through affinity of tonality, and consecutive qualities of spirit and meaning; or for the sake of contrast. The principal types of Complex forms are Sonata, Suite, Opera, Oratorio, and all forms in which a consecutive musical idea is carried on by means of completed pieces in succession. In all these very large forms, like Opera, for instance, the work is grouped into smaller unities by its division into acts, and each act is generally ended by an elaborate finale, which often reaches great development. As, for instance, the third finale in Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," and the third finale in Wagner's "Meistersinger."

Sonata. The sonata is the most important of all the complex forms; it is the form of all pieces of that name, as well as of the Symphony, Concerto, Trio, Quartette, Quintet, and nearly all varieties of chamber music. A Sonata consists of from three to four movements. At least one of these movements is a sonata movement (Sonata-piece, Sonata-satz) of the form already described in the ternary forms. The first movement usually belongs to this form, and many times the last. Occasionally the same form, somewhat shortened, is employed for the second movement. The first movement of the sonata is generally (almost invariably) thematic. The second movement is generally in some kind of slow movement, lyric and ideal in character. If there are four movements, the third is either a minuet with trio, or a Scherzo with trio (Song-form with trio). The closing movement is either a Rondo or else a Finale, the latter being a sonata-piece. Many sonatas of Beethoven deviate somewhat from this order, such as that in A-flat, opus 26, which begins with an Air and Variations, has a funeral march for second movement, the only sonata-piece being the Finale. The so-called "Moonlight" sonata, opus 27, No. 2, has the slow movement first. The second is a Scherzo, and the Finale is a sonata-piece. The great sonata in C minor, opus 111, begins with a vigorous introduction, leading into a strong sonata-piece, and there is only one other movement, which is an Arietta with variations.

The Symphony is carried out in precisely the same manner as the sonata, except that the development is longer. The Concerto has generally only three movements, the short Scherzo being omitted. In some modern concertos all four movements are condensed into one, or rather the whole is made continuous.

Conditioned Forms are those in which the form is conditioned by extra musical considerations. The prominent types are the Recitative, where textual declamation is the primary condition, and emotional coloring the secondary, the purely musical remaining subordinate to both these; all types of Song and Aria, where the delivery of a text and the intensification of a dramatic moment are the main objects sought. Sometimes these qualities are so accomplished that the musical effect as such is heightened; examples of this are afforded by Schubert's "Erl-King," "Margaret at the Spinning Wheel," "To be sung on the waters," etc. All forms of the conditioned character conform to the general principles of pure form, to as complete an extent as they are able without sacrificing the immediate end sought in their own creation.

Note 1. The principles of form, whether large or small, are the same. Unity, symmetry and contrast are the elements which have to be combined.

Note 2. The above classification of form exhausts the subject, and affords place for every variety of form which can be created.

RULES OF PRONUNCIATION.

ITALIAN.

VOWELS.

a is always like ä in father.

e has (1) the sound of ĕ in pen, and (2) the sound of ā in fate.

i is pronounced like ē in me, and in short syllables, ĭ in pin.

j, at the beginning of a syllable, is like y in you. At the end of a word it is like ē in be.

o has the sound of ō in tone.

u has always the sound of oo in cool.

CONSONANTS.

b, d, f, l, n, p, q, v, are the same as in English.

c, before a, o, and u, has the sound of k; before e, i, and y it has the sound of tsh, or that of ch in the word cheek. When doubled (cc) and followed by e, i, or y, the first is pronounced like t, and the second takes its usual sound.

ch, before e or i, has the sound of k.

g, before a, o, or u, is hard, as in go; before e or i, it has the sound of j or soft g, as in gem. When doubled and followed by e or i, it has the sound of dj, or like dg in lodge.

gh, followed by e or i, is pronounced like g in go.

gl, followed by i, preceding another vowel, is pronounced like ll in million.

gn, followed by a, e, i, o, or u, is like ni in the English word minion.

gua, gue, gui are pronounced gwä. gwā, gwē.

gia, gio, giu are pronounced djiä, djiō, djioo, in one syllable, giving the i a very faint sound, differing almost imperceptibly from the effect of the same combination with the i omitted.

s has (1) the hard sound as in sis, and (2) the soft sound as in ease; usually the latter when occurring between two vowels.

sc, before e or i, is like sh in shall; before a, o, or u, it has the sound of sk.

sch is always like sk, or sch in school.

scia, scio, sciu are pronounced shä, shō, shoo.

r, at the beginning of words, is like the English, but at the end of words or syllables, or when combined with another consonant, it should have a rolling sound.

w and x are not found in Italian, except in foreign words.

z has usually the sound of ts; it is sometimes pronounced like dz.

Italian words are pronounced exactly as written, there being no silent letter, except h. The vowels always preserve their proper sounds, forming no diphthongs and being uninfluenced by the consonants with which they may be combined.

In words of two or more syllables there is usually a slight emphasis placed on the penult or antepenult, but rarely on the last syllable.

GERMAN.

VOWELS.

a has the sound of ä as in far.

au is like ou in house.

ai occurs but rarely, and has the sound of ĭ as in pine.

ae or ä when long is like ā in mate; when short it is like ĕ in met.

aeu or äu is like oy in boy.

e has (1) the sound of ĕ as in help, and (2) the sound of ā in hate.

ei has always the sound of ĭ in pine.

eu is like oi in loiter.

i has the sound of ĭ as in pin.

ie takes the sound of ē as in tree.

o has the sound of ō as in tone.

oe or ö has nearly the sound of ĕ as in fell.

u has the sound of oo as in moon.

ue or ü has the sound of the French u.

y is used only in foreign words, where it does not differ from ĭ in pin.

CONSONANTS.

b and d are pronounced as in English.

c is only used in foreign words. Before e, i, and y it is pronounced like ts; before other vowels and consonants it is like k.

ch has nothing corresponding to it in English. It is a guttural sound, produced by pronouncing ahk, but taking care not to close the vocal organs in sounding k. At the beginning of words ch is like k.

chs is pronounced like ks or x.

f, l, m, p, t and x are the same as in English.

g has the hard sound as in go. In some parts of Germany the unaccented final ig is softened into something like ikh.

h at the beginning of words is aspirated; between two vowels the aspiration is very weak, and before a consonant or at the end of words it is mute; but in this case it makes the preceding vowel long.

j is equivalent to the English y in you, and is always followed by a vowel.

k is like the English k, but is never mute before n.

ng sounds like ng in length; but in compound words where the first ends in n and the last begins with g, they are separated, and both pronounced distinctly.

q is always joined with u, and together they are pronounced like kw.

ph has the sound of f.

pf unites the two letters in one sound uttered with compressed lips.

r has a stronger sound than in English, and is the same at the beginning, middle, or end of a word.

s is like the English s. It is sounded at the end of words, and between two vowels it frequently takes the sound of z.

sch is like the English sh in ship.

th takes always the sound of t; h being silent. It has never the sound of th in thee.

tz intensifies the sound of z.

v is pronounced like f.

w following a vowel answers to the English v.

FRENCH.

VOWELS.

a has two sounds; ă as in mass, and ä as in bar.

ai is like ā in fate.

au is similar to o in English.

e is (1) like ĕ in met; (2) like ā in fate; (3) similar to ŭ in bud, the latter chiefly in monosyllables, as le, de, etc. It is frequently silent at the end of words.

ei is nearly like ā in fate.

eu resembles ŭ in tub.

i has the sound (1) of ĭ in pin, (2) of ē in me.

ia has nearly the sound of ia in medial.

ie is like ee in bee.

o is pronounced like ŏ in rob, and like ō in rope.

u has no equivalent in English, but resembles the sound of e in dew. By prolonging the sound of e, taking care not to introduce the sound of w, we get an approximate sound of the French u, or ü as it will be marked in this work.

y, when initial, or coming between two consonants, or standing as a syllable by itself, is the same as the French i (ĭ in ill); but between two vowels it is equivalent to double French ĭ (ĭĭ), the first forming a diphthong with the preceding one and the second with the one following.

CONSONANTS.

Final consonants are almost always silent, except c, f, l, n, and r, which are generally sounded.

b, at the beginning and in the middle of words, is the same as in English.

c has (1) the sound of k before a, o, or u; (2) when written with the çedilla, or before e or i, it has the sound of s. c final is sounded unless preceded by n.

ch is pronounced like sh in she. In words derived from the Greek, ch is pronounced like k.

d is the same as in English. It is silent at the end of words.

f is like the English; when final it is usually sounded.

g, before a, o, or u, is hard, as in go; but before e, i, or y it has the sound of z in the English word azure. In the combination gue, or gui, the u is silent, but the g takes its hard sound.

gn is pronounced like nĭ in union.

h is mute or slightly aspirated.

j is pronounced like z in azure.

k has the same sound as in English.

l has (1) the same sound as in English, and (2) the liquid sound, as in million.

m and n, when not nasal, have the same sound as in English; if preceded by a vowel in the same syllable, they are always nasal unless immediately followed by a vowel in the next syllable.

am, an, em, en are pronounced somewhat like an in want.

im, in, ym, aim, ain, eim, ein are pronounced like an in anger.

om and on are like on in song.

um and un are pronounced like un in wrung.

p is generally the same as in English. It is sometimes silent, and always when at the end of a word.

q is usually followed by u, in which case they are together sounded like the letter k.

r is given more roughly than in English. It is often silent when preceded by the vowel e.

s has generally the same sound as in English; between two vowels it has generally the same sound as in the English word rose.

sc is the same as in English. s final is generally silent.

t has its hard English sound, but in tial, tiel, and tion it has the sound of s.

th is always the same as t alone. t final is usually silent.

v is like the English, only a little softer.

w is found only in foreign words, and is pronounced like v.

x, initial, is pronounced like gz; it occurs but in few words.

ex, at the beginning of words, is sounded like egz. In other places, and between two vowels, it is pronounced like ks.

z is like z in zone.

Final consonants, which would otherwise be silent, are frequently sounded by carrying them over to the next word, when commencing with a vowel.

NOTE.—While the French language does not properly have syllabic emphasis, the rate of speaking is very fast, and the practical result is an emphasis upon the last syllable of words. This rule is almost universal. In some cases we have marked it, in others not.

PRONOUNCING AND DEFINING

DICTIONARY OF MUSIC.

A. 1. Name of a musical pitch produced by from 435 to 450 vibrations per second, and the octaves of the same. French pitch is the former rate and American concert pitch approximately the latter. Also the name of all octaves of these pitches.

2. The name of the staff-degree representing the pitch A or any of its octaves; the name of the key upon the keyboard producing A; the name of open strings producing A. The intonation of the orchestra is adjusted from A of the oboe, the oboe being incapable of modifying its pitch to any practicable extent.

3. Abbr. for Alto (viola).

a (ä), It. By, for, to, at, in, etc.

A in alt. The A placed upon the first upper added line.

A in altissimo. An octave above A in alt.

A ballata (ä bäl-lä'tä), It. In the style of a ballata.

Abandon (ä-bänh-dōnh), Fr. Without restraint; with self-abandon; with ease.

A battuta (ä bät-too'tä), It. As beaten; strictly in time.

Abb. Abbr. for Abbassamento.

Abbadare (äb-bä-dä'rĕ), It. Take care; pay attention.

Abbandonasi (äb-bän-dō-nä'sĭ), It. Without restraint; with passionate expression.

Abbandonatamente (äb-bän-dō-nä-tä-mĕn-tĕ), It. Vehemently; violently.

Abbandone (äb-bän-dō'nĕ), It. Making the time subservient to the expression; despondingly; with self-abandonment.

Abbandono (äb-bän-dō'nō), It. With passionate expression.

Abbassamento di mano (äb-bäs-sä-mĕn'tō dē mä-nō), It. The down beat, or descent of the hand in beating time.

Abbassamento di voce (äb-bäs-sä-mĕn'tō dē vō'tshĕ), It. Diminishing or lowering of the voice.

Abbassimento (äb-bäs-sĭ-mĕn'tō), It. Under.

Abbellare (äb-bĕl-lä'rĕ), It. To embellish with ornaments.

Abbellimenti (äb-bĕl-lĭ-mĕn'tĭ), It. Ornaments introduced to embellish a plain melody; grace notes.

Abbellimento (äb-bĕl-lĭ-mĕn'tō), It. A grace note, or ornament.

Abbellire (äb-bĕl-lē'rĕ), It. To embellish with ornaments.

Abbellitura (äb-bĕl-lĭ-too'rä), Abbellĭture (äb-bĕl-lĭ-too'rĕ), It. } Ornaments; embellishments.

Abbreviation marks. 1. Oblique strokes which distinguish the eighth, sixteenth, or thirty-second notes; when applied to the stem of the quarter or half note, signify as many repetitions of the shorter note thus indicated as are equal to the longer note represented. Thus, is equivalent to

2. A diagonal stroke with a dot each side signifies a repetition of a group of notes, or sometimes of a complete measure.

3. When the long notes are omitted, the oblique strokes, distinguishing eighth, sixteenth, etc., notes, are sometimes employed to denote a repetition of such short notes. Thus, indicate a repetition of eighths, sixteenths, thirty-seconds, respectively.

4. A short horizontal line, a row of dots, or a waving line is used to express the repetition, or a continuation of the influence, of the preceding character. Thus,

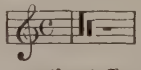
5. A combination of rests so written as to denote a long period of silence. These rests indicate a period of eleven measures' silence.



6. Figures, when placed upon the staff, or over a measure in which rests are written, serve to indicate the number of whole rests or measures of silence.

Abendmusik (ä-bĕnd-moo-sēk'), Ger. Evening music; music of a soft and quiet character.

A bene placito (ä bā'nĕ plä-tshĕ'tō), It. At pleasure.

Abgestossen (äb-ghĕ-stŏs's'n), or Abstossen (äb-stŏs's'n), Ger. } Staccato.

Abnehmend (äb-nā'mĕnd), Ger. Fading away; diminuendo.

Absatz (äb-sätz), Ger. Cadence.

Absolute music. Music developed freely, according to its ideal, merely as music. In contradistinction to vocal music, which is restricted by the words; program music, devoted to a series of incidents; and dance music, restricted to the steps of the dance. In short, high art music, loyal to the highest ideal.

Absteigende Tonarten (äb-stī-gĕn-dĕ tōn-är't'n), Ger. Descending scales or keys.

Abtönen (äb-tĕh'nén), Ger. To deviate from the right tone.

Abub (ä-boob), Heb. A flute, or hautboy.

Abwechselnd (äb-vĕk's'lnd), Ger. Alternating; changing. In organ-playing, alternately, with different manuals; in choir-singing, antiphonally; in dance music, change of movements.

Abyssinian flute. An instrument resembling the German flute, but with mouthpiece like the clarinet, and played upon from the end like an oboe.

Academie de Musique (ä-kä-dĕ-mē dŭh mooseek'), Fr. An academy of music, consisting of professors and scholars; a society for promoting musical culture.

Academie Royale de Musique, Fr. The name given to the opera-house in Paris.

Academie spirituelle (ä-kä-dĕ-mē spĭ-rĭ-tooĕl'), Fr. A performance or concert of sacred music.

A cappella (ä käp-pĕl'lä), or, Alla cappella. It. } In the church or chapel style. Without instrumental accompaniment.

A capriccio (ä kä-prĭ'tshĭō), It. In a capricious style; according to the taste of the performer. Especially in the matter of time and phrasing. More commonly the former.

Acatalectic (ä-kä-tä-lĕk'tĭc). Gr. A verse having the complete number of syllables without superfluity or deficiency.

Acathistus (ä-kä-thĭs-toos), Gr. A hymn of praise sung in the ancient Greek Church in honor of the Virgin.

Academia (ä-kä-dĕ-mē'ä), It. An academy. The word also means a concert.

Accarezzevole (äk-kä-rĕt-tsä'vō-lĕ), It. Blandishing; in a persuasive and caressing manner.

Accarezzevolmente (äk-kä-rĕt-tsĕ-vōl-mĕn'tĕ), It. Caressingly; coaxingly.

Accel. (ät-tshĕl), } It. } Abbreviations of Acceldo. (ät-tshĕl-dō), } } Accelerando.

Accelerando (ät-tshĕl-ĕ-rän'dō), It. Accelerating the time; gradually increasing the velocity of the movement. An acceleration generally occurs when approaching a climax. The disturbance thus produced in the long rhythms is generally compensated by corresponding retards at the climax.

Acceleratamente (ät-tshĕl-ĕ-rä-tä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Speedily.

Accelerato (ät-tshĕl-ĕ-rä'tō), It. Accelerated; increasing in rapidity.

Accent. 1. Stress, or emphasis, (a) upon a certain division of measure; (b) a tone in a figure; (c) a chord in an harmonic phrase, and the mark or marks by means of which such stress is indicated. Measure accent falls upon the beginning of the first beat; and in measures having more than three beats, upon the first beat of each aliquot part likewise. (See Measure.) Besides the accent upon the beat (the bar indicating the place of the strong accent to be upon the next time-place following) there are subordinate grades of what might be called "molecular" accentuation, upon the beginning of divided beats, and upon the beginning of each aliquot part of a beat when the subdivision extends to quarter-pulse division.

2. The accentuation of a melodic phrase is primarily determined by the measure, but the occurrence of dissonance adds fresh element, every dissonance occurring upon the beginning of a beat, or upon the beginning of a half beat (in quarter-pulse subdivision), receiving an accent of its own, partly due to its rhythmic place, but intensified for the sake of the dissonance. So also dissonant chords, such as appoggiaturas, suspensions, etc., are accented. What is called Syncopation is an accent breaking into the natural order of the measure. (See Syncopation.)

3. Also the name applied to the marks indicating accent. The chief of these are the horizontal short angle >, and the abbreviation sf. or sfz. In old music (from Mozart and before) the expression fp. often occurs indicating that one tone is loud and all the following soft. (See Forzando, also Sforzando.) The short vertical accent standing upon its base (∧) is not properly an accent, but a mark of tenuto (q. v.), but in some French and Belgian music it is occasionally employed where the horizontal mark is intended.

4. Accent is the life of music, and is of multitudinous variety of shading and intensity.

Accento (ät-tshĕn'tō), It. Accent or emphasis laid upon certain notes.

Accenti (ät-tshĕn'tē), It. } Accents.
Accent (äk-sänh), Fr. }

Accentuare (ät-tshĕn-too-ä'rĕ), It. To accentuate; to mark with an accent.

Accentuation. The act of accenting; the giving to the several notes of a piece their proper emphasis or expression; the art of placing accents.

Accentuato (ät-tshĕn-too-ä'tō), It. Distinctly and strongly accented.

Accentuiren (äk-tsĕn-too-ē'r'n), Ger. To accent.

Accentus (äk-sĕn'toos), Lat. Accent. "Under the name Accentus were classed those portions of the ritual song (of the Roman Catholic Church) chanted or intoned by the officiating priest, the deacon, subdeacon, or other sacred ministers at the altar; in contradistinction to Concentus, which referred to all that should be sung by the assistants or by a special trained choir." (Rev. F. H. Haberl.) See the next article.

Accentus ecclesiastici, Lat. Ecclesiastical accents are melodic forms used in the Roman Catholic Church in chanting, or rather reciting, the collects, epistles, gospels, etc. These melodic inflections which vary the monotone recitation, correspond with the comma, colon, semicolon, period, mark of interrogation, etc. See the preceding article. These variations were of seven kinds, called the immutabilis, medius, gravis, acutus, moderatus, interrogatus, and finalis, each of which was practically an upward or downward inflection extending to a particular interval, namely: immutabilis, monotone, medius, a minor third, sol me; gravis, a fifth, sol do; acutus, sol mi me sol; moderatus, sol la sol; interrogatus, sol fa fa sol; finalis, sol la sol fa mi re—thus closing on the ecclesiastical Dorian key.

Accessory notes. Those notes situated one degree above and one degree below the principal note of a turn.

Accessory parts. Accompaniments.

Accessory tones. Harmonics. Tones faintly heard when the principal tone dies away.

Accessory voices. Accompanying voices.

Acciaccare (ät-tshī-äk-kä'rĕ), It. A broken and unexpected way of striking a chord.

Acciaccato (ät-tshī-äk-kä'tō), It. Violently.

Acciaccatura (ät-tshī-äk-kä-too'rä), It. A species of arpeggio; an accessory note placed before the principal note, the accent being on the principal note. Practically about the same as an appoggiatura.

Accidenti (ät-tshī-dĕn'tē), It. } Accidentals.
Accidents (äk-sī-dänh), Fr. }

Accidentals. 1. The name applied to sharps, flats, naturals, double sharps, and double flats occurring in written music elsewhere than in the signature. (See Signature.) The name accidental appertains to the characters only, and not to the tones they help to indicate; many of the tones written by the help of these unforeseen characters being merely the natural diatonic tones of the key into which the passage may have momentarily digressed. (See Modulation.) Moreover, minor keys universally require an accidental for the leading tone—always a sharp or a natural.

Accidentals effect the staff-degrees to which they are applied throughout the measure in which they occur; and in strict practice no farther. But there have been theorists holding that in certain cases (as when the last tone of the measure is written with an accidental, and this tone is tied over into the next measure) the accidental is continued until some other tone intervenes in the same voice. In consequence of this questionable exception the great majority of composers introduce a natural before again using a staff-degree recently affected by an accidental, even when it occurs in a later measure, but in immediate connection. This practice is precautionary, only. It would be simpler to make the rule inflexible that the influence of the accidental ceases with the measure in which it occurs.

Unlike chromatic signs in the signatures, accidentals do not affect equivalent degrees, but only those to which they are actually applied.

2. This term has also been applied without exception to all chromatic signs originally applied, and to those signs revoking preceding signs—namely, both to those in the signature and those occurring in the course of a piece. The origin of all these signs are the "round B" (B rotundum) and "square B" (B quadratum), by which in the middle ages B-flat was distinguished from B-natural. By and by the two forms of the letter B became common signs of elevation and depression, being applied not only to B, but also to other notes. The square B assumed various shapes, two of them like our sharp and natural; but no distinction was made between them till towards the end of the seventeenth century—a flat not only flattened a natural note, but also revoked a preceding sharp; a sharp not only sharpened a natural note, but also revoked a preceding flat. Double sharps and flats did not come into use till about 1700. In earlier times, more especially before 1600, composers left it very much to the performers to find out what accidentals were required. For a long time, if there was any signature at all, it consisted of a flat only. Before the seventeenth century it was not customary to put more than one flat or one sharp in the signature. Even as late as the first half of the eighteenth century we meet with various anomalies. Bach, Handel, and their contemporaries, for instance, furnish examples of placing one flat and one sharp less in the signature than the key required, accidentals being used in the course of the piece instead of the sharp or flat in the signature. In short, our present system of using sharps, flats, and naturals was not fixed till the second half of the eighteenth century.

Accolade (äk-kō-läd′), Fr. The brace which connects two, three, or more staves together.

Accom. } Abbreviations of Accompaniment.
Accomp. }

Accom. ad lib. An abbreviation of Accompaniment ad libitum.

Accommodare (äk-kŏm-mō-dä′rĕ), It. To tune an instrument.

Accompagnamento (äk-kŏm-pän-yä-mĕn′tō), It. Accompaniment; the figured bass or harmony.

Accompagnare (äk-kŏm-pä-nä′rĕ), It. To accompany; to play from the figured bass.

Accompagnato (äk-kŏm-pä-nä′tō), It. Accompanied.

Accompagné (äk-kŏmh-pänh-yā), Fr. Accompanied.

Accompagnement (äk-kŏmh-pänh-yĕ-mänh), Fr. An accompaniment.

Accompagner (äk-kŏmh-pänh-yā), Fr. To accompany.

Accompaniment. A part added to a solo or other principal part, to enhance and enrich its effect. Vocal or instrumental parts in a composition which do not include the principal melody but fill up the harmony, sustain the rhythm, and, by embellishments, heighten the general effect.

Accompaniment ad libitum. Use the accompaniment or not, at pleasure.

Accompaniment obligato. The accompaniment must be used.

Accompanist. The person playing the accompaniment.

Accomp. oblto. An abbreviation of accompanimento obligato.

Accoppiato (äk-kŏp-pĭ-ä′tō), It. Bound, tied; joined together.

Accorciare (äk-kōr-tshĭ-ä′rĕ), It. To contract, to abridge.

Accord (äk-kōr), Fr. A chord; a concord; consonance.

Accordamento (äk-kōr-dä-mĕn′tō), It. Accord of parts; unison.

Accordando (äk-kōr-dän′dō), It. Tuning.

Accordant (äk-kōr-dänh), Fr. In concord, in unison.

Accordatura (äk-kōr-dä-too′rä), It. System of tuning.

Accordeon. A simple musical instrument, of oblong form, invented by Damian, of Vienna, in 1829. The tone is produced by the inspiration and respiration of a pair of bellows acting upon metallic reeds or tongues. (Free reed.)

The first instruments had only four buttons, or keys, each of which acted on two reeds, making the compass one octave of diatonic scale, but with a separate arrangement, by which these notes might be accompanied with a tonic and dominant harmony. At first it was used only as a toy, but the introduction of a chromatic scale made the accordeon more capable of producing a varied melody and harmony, although the awkwardness of the form was always a hindrance to its use. The German accordeon, or concertina (q.v.), of hexagonal form, made the principle of the accordeon more acceptable. The English concertina (q.v.) and the harmonium (q.v.) are superior instruments constructed upon similar principles.

Ædophone. A musical instrument invented in the eighteenth century.

Æolian. One of the ancient Greek modes answering to the diatonic succession, la si do re mi fa sol la; referring to the winds; played upon by the wind.

Æolian, the. An automatic instrument of the reed organ class, with many sets of reeds, and mechanism enabling it to perform overtures and much pretentious music.

Æolian harp. An instrument invented by Kircher about the middle of the seventeenth century. The tones are produced by the strings being so arranged that the air causes vibration among them when it passes through.

The box of the Æolian harp should be long enough to exactly fit the window where it is proposed to place it, and about five or six inches deep. There should be at least six strings of silk or gut, tuned in unison, passing over bridges about three fourths of an inch high, near each end. Under the influence of the wind the strings vibrate in sweetly harmonious chords, changing with every variation in the current of the wind. Of course all the tones produced are necessarily partial tones of the vibrating string; but the varying intensity of the wind makes so many changes in the combinations of tones produced as to give at times much the effect of mysterious intelligence.

Æolian lyre. The Æolian harp.

Æolian mute. A combination of the Æolian pitch-pipe and the mute for the violin.

Æolian pianoforte. A pianoforte with reed attachment, invented and manufactured by the firm of T. Gilbert & Co., Boston, about 1850. The piano, of the small pattern of square then universally manufactured, was provided with a set of free reeds and a bellows operated by a pedal at the right of the regular pedals of the piano. The reed instrument was of the old-fashioned "melodeon" pattern, the reeds being practically unvoiced, and the bellows of the pressure variety. The design of the addition was that of giving the piano a sustaining power, which up to that time had not been secured. The effect of the two tones in combination was agreeable in passages where sostenuto was desired. But the instrument had only a temporary currency in consequence of the practical impossibility of keeping the strings in tune with the reeds.

Æolodicon (ä-ō-lō'dĭ-kŏn), Gr. A keyed instrument, the tone of which resembles that of the organ, and is produced by steel springs, which are put in vibration by means of bellows.

Allemande (äll-mänhd), Fr A German air. Also an obsolete dance form in common measure, beginning upon the last beat. The measure was slow, and the steps were made in a rapid, sliding manner, as in the modern waltz, but there was no turning, only a peculiar entwining and unloosening of the arms of the dancers in the various steps. It is said by some that the Allemande was invented in the lesser provinces of Germany or Switzerland, but its antiquity is unknown. Scarlatti, Corelli, Bach, Handel, and other composers of the period they represent, incorporated the measure of this dance in their suites, sonatas, and lessons, in which it was written in common time of four crotchets in a measure. But many peasant dances of this name are in 3-4 or 3-8 measure.

Altist. An alto singer.

Altista (äl-tēs'tä), It. } One who has an alto
Altiste (äl-tēst), Fr. } voice.

Alto (äl'tō), It. High. (1) One of the four chief classes of the human voice; the deeper of the two classes of the female voice, which in England is more commonly called contralto. There are to be distinguished three different kinds of alto voices: those of women, boys, and men. Among the latter are again to be distinguished those of the castrati and of the alti naturali, tenori acuti, or falsetti. The last-mentioned male altos, in England also called counter tenors, make use of a developed falsetto (head voice). The English music written for this kind of voice demands a compass from g to c‴. The alti naturali, who, till the introduction of the castrati, sang in the churches of Italy and elsewhere the soprano and alto parts, are said to have sung up to a‴. For the compass of the female alto see Contralto. (2) Alto is also one of the names of the stringed instruments, which is a little larger and a fifth lower in pitch than an ordinary violin. Viola, Tenor, and Bratsche are synonyms. The three upper strings of the viola correspond with the three lowest of the violin. The question very naturally arises why the term alto (high) should be applied to the lowest voices and a low-pitched instrument. The reason is probably to be found in the fact that this part was formerly sung by very high male voices, and the notes representing its usual range were written by means of the C clef, which brought them upon the highest lines of the staff and upon added lines above.

Alto basso (äl-tō bäs'sō), It. A primitive instrument formerly in use in northern Italy, consisting of a wooden box, over which were stretched a few gut strings, which the performer struck with a stick held in his left hand, while he played on a flageolet held in his right hand.

Aria (ä'rĭ-ä), It. An air; a song; a vocal composition for a single voice, with instrumental accompaniment. The aria, such as we find it in the opera, oratorio, cantata, etc., in the structure of which it forms one of the most important elements, was developed in the seventeenth century. Of the varieties of the aria form none is historically more noteworthy than the aria with da capo—that is, a composition consisting of a more or less extended first part, a shorter second part, and a repetition of the first part. For a long period it was the prevalent type. Most of the other varieties of the aria form sprang out of this one. For instance, that in which a free, modified repetition took the place of the da capo; or that in which the repetition was altogether dispensed with; or that in which the center of gravity was to be found in the second part, and so forth. Arias, however, have often been written in the rondo form, and also in what we may call the abridged sonata form. Since Mozart, the great masters have departed more and more from the conventional pattern, and have taken for their guides, as regards form as well as sentiment, the character and mood of the person for whom, and the nature of the situation for which, the aria is intended. See Air.

Ariose cantate (ä-rĭ-ō'zĕ kän-tä'tĕ), It. Airs in a style between a song and recitative, introducing frequent changes in time and manner.

Arioso (är-ĭ-ō'zō), It. In style of an air; melodious. Historically considered, the aria marks a single moment in the course of a dramatic action. The text often consists of but a few words, many times repeated (as we find in Handel's oratorios, etc.), and the musical development is the main thing. The opposite of aria is recitative (q. v.), in which the declamation of the syllables is the main thing, colored, perhaps, by means of clever orchestration. The arioso stands between these extremes. In modern practice it has had a great development, especially at the hands of Wagner. An arioso declaims the text about as carefully as a recitative; it accentuates the emotional moment of the drama about as consistently as the aria; but it is of a more flexible character, and, being less bound by conditions of symmetry, is free to follow the delicate emotional transitions or shadings of the text in a way impracticable for an aria in classical form. The problem of the composer in composing an arioso for an important moment of a work is to indulge himself in free fantasy to the extreme extent needed for dramatically representing the text, and at the same time not depart from symmetry, or, at least, a quasi symmetry, and a unity of key satisfactory to the musical ear.

Bar. A line drawn across the staff to show the place of the strong accent, which is always upon the time-space immediately following, and hence to show the division of measures. The measure itself, and the space between the bars, is sometimes called a bar, but improperly. The name bar means simply the line, and its office is to indicate the place of the strong accent. A very heavy mark called Double Bar is used in psalmody to indicate the end of phrases and lines of poetry, and in instrumental music sometimes to indicate the end of a strain. When accompanied by dots upon the left or right, the strain upon that side is to be repeated. Double bars sometimes serve to mark the measure, and sometimes are inserted in the middle of a measure. There is no rule upon this subject. Bars did not come into more general use till about the middle of the seventeenth century. In scores they are to be met with centuries before that time, but for the most part only in theoretical books, as it was not then the custom to print compositions in score. With the rise of the monodic style in Italy, towards the end of the sixteenth century, bars came to the fore, as the publications with a basso continuo prove. The systems of notation called Tablature have almost always made use of bars.

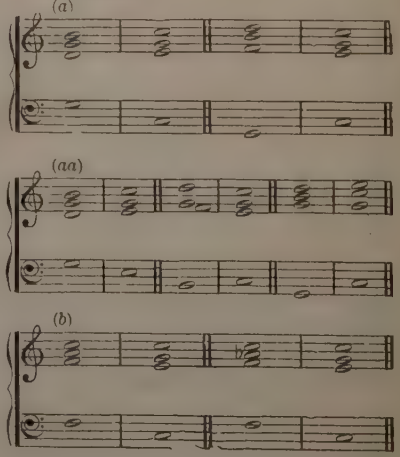
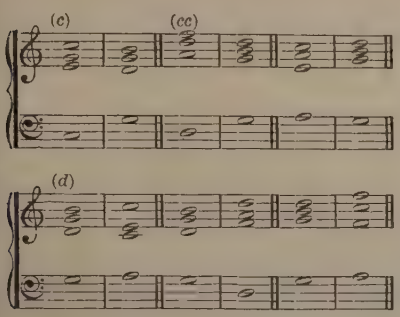
Cad. An abbreviation of Cadenza.

Cadence (kā-dānhs), Fr. A shake, or trill; also, a close in harmony.

Cadence. A close. Lit., "a fall." The term applies to melody as well as to harmony, (1) to the last melodic step of a strain (not necessarily a "fall" as regards pitch, but always a subsidence of motion into relative rest), and to a shake or brilliant passage of more or less extent, which leads up to the close of a piece, or part of a piece (v. Cadenza); (2) to two chords which form a close, mark a point of rest, complete or incomplete.

The harmonic cadences may be divided into four classes. (1) The chords of the dominant and tonic form a full, or authentic, cadence, which is perfect when the bass has the fundamental note of the first and of the second chord, and the highest part the octave of the fundamental note of the second chord (a), but otherwise is imperfect (aa). (2) The chords of the subdominant (major or minor) and tonic form the plagal cadence. According to some theorists it is, like the authentic, a full close; according to others it is not (b). (3) The chord of the tonic (c), or any other chord (cc), and that of the dominant form a half close, or semicadence. Some writers, however, call this cadence imperfect. Indeed, the nomenclature is very unsettled. (4) An interrupted, deceptive, or false cadence occurs where the chord of the dominant is followed by any chord except that of the tonic (d).





Cadence, authentic. A perfect, or final, cadence; the harmony of the dominant, followed by that of the tonic, or the progression of the dominant to the tonic.

Cadens (kā'dĕns), Lat. }

Cadenz (kä-dĕnts), Ger. } A cadence; an or-Cadenza (kä-dĕn'tsä), It. } namental passage introduced near the close of a song or solo, either by the composer or extemporaneously by the performer. A cadence (q. v.). In English the word cadenza is used in the sense of a short, or a more or less extended flourish, which does not form part of the rhythmical structure of a composition, but is a mere intercalation. Such flourishes may be met with anywhere in the course of vocal and instrumental compositions, more especially, however, at the end of the last solo of pieces for solo voices or instruments. In the aria and kindred forms the cadenza was a prominent feature. It assumed, however, the greatest importance in the concerto; there the flourish expands often into a brilliant fantasia on themes of the composition into which it is introduced—a fantasia either improvised by the performer or written out in full by the composer. These long concerto cadenzas occur in the first and last movements, at the end of the last solo, and begin usually on the chord of the fourth and sixth, preceding the full close (dominant, tonic).

Canon (kăn'ŏn). In ancient music, a rule, or method, for determining the intervals of notes. A musical composition for two or more voice-parts, in which the essential thing is that each of the parts in turn sings the very same melody (called the subject), note for note, while the other voices make harmony with it. The simplest form of canon is the old form called a Round, so called from the voices following each other round and round through the very same notes, but at intervals producing harmony.

A canon may have one subject or more than one, and it may be for two voices or more than two. Hence such names as "2 in 1," meaning that two voices have a single subject; "4 in 2," meaning that four voices have two subjects, etc.

Canons are further named from the interval in which the second voice begins. For instance, at a) below, the second voice enters in the octave of the same phrase as given out by the first voice. It is, therefore, a canon "2 in 1" at the octave. At b) the second voice enters in the under fifth, and at c) in the over sixth. See, also, Imitation.

Cantate (känh-tät), Fr. } The word originally meant something Cantate (kän-tä'tĕ, Ger. } sung, in contradistinction to something played (sonata). So varied are the innumerable exemplifications of the cantata that it is impossible to define its character. Now this name is given to a vocal composition of some extent, consisting of recitatives, arias, choruses, etc., with orchestral accompaniments in most cases; formerly it often signified a short vocal composition for one voice, with organ, harpsichord, or some other simple accompaniment. Indeed, the range of the cantata may be said to extend from an elaborate song to a short oratorio, and an opera not intended for the stage.

Clarinet. One of the most important wood wind instruments. It is said to have been invented about 1700 by J. C. Denner, of Nuremberg. It consists of a cylindrical tube, with finger-holes and keys, which terminates in a bell, and has a beak-like mouthpiece with a single beating reed. Its extreme compass extends from e to a'''. There are clarinets of different pitch; those commonly used in the orchestra are the clarinets in C, in B♭, and in A. The clarinets in D, E♭, F, A♭, etc., are rarely used except in military bands. All clarinets, the one in C excepted, are transposing instruments; that is to say, they do not sound the notes which are written. For instance, the B♭ clarinet sounds them a tone lower, and the A clarinet a minor third lower. Music for the clarinet is written in the G clef. (V. Chalumeau.) Besides the above-mentioned clarinets, there are a bass clarinet and a baritone clarinet. Now clarinets are also made of ebonite. Also an organ-stop, voiced like a clarinet.

Clarinet, alto. A large clarinet, curved near the mouthpiece, and a fifth deeper than the ordinary clarinet.

Clarinet, bass. A clarinet whose tones are an octave deeper than those of the C or B♭ clarinet.

Clarté de voix (klär-tā dŭh vwä), Fr. Clearness of voice.

Classic, or, Classical. These words are used in music, as in the other arts and in literature, in various senses, which often more or less overlap. (1) "Of the first class, of the first rank;" more especially applied to the older, universally acknowledged, masters and their works, those of the best epoch of the art. (2) Having, or resembling, the style and temper of these masters and their works —their perfectness of form, and sobriety, and ideal beauty of contents. The opposite of "classical" in this sense is "romantic" (q. v.). Also in popular use to designate serious music in general, as distinguished from the merely ad captandum and ephemeral.

Classical music. Standard music; music of first rank, written by composers of the highest order.

Con celerita (kōn tshā-lĕ-rī-tä'), It. With celerity, with rapidity.

Concento (kōn-tshĕn'to), It. Concord, agreement, harmony of voices and instruments.

Concentrare (kōn-tshĕn-trä'rĕ), It. To concentrate the sounds. It also means to veil the sounds in mystery.

Concentus (kōn-tsĕn'toos), Lat. Harmonious blending of sounds; concord.

Concert. A performance in public of practical musicians, either vocal or instrumental, or both. (2) Harmony, unison.

Concert, amateur. A concert of nonprofessional musicians.

Concertando (kōn-tshĕr-tän'dō), It. A concertante.

Concertant (kōnh-sĕr-tänh'), Fr. Performer in a concert, a musician.

Concertante (kōn-tshĕr-tän'tĕ), It. A piece in which each part is alternately principal and subordinate, as in a duo concertante. (2) A concerto for two or more instruments, with accompaniments for a full band. (3) A female concert singer.

Concertato (kōn-tshĕr-tä'tō), It. In an irregular and extemporaneous manner. See, also, Concertante.

Concerted music. Music in which several voices or instruments are heard at the same time; in opposition to solo music.

Concertgeber (kōn-tsĕrt'gä'bĕr), Ger. One who gives a concert.

Concertina (kōn-tshĕr-tē'nä), It. A small musical instrument, hexagonal in form, which, as regards construction, is somewhat similar to the accordion (q. v.). The English treble concertina has a compass of about three and a half or four octaves (from g to g'''') with all the intermediate semitones, and is a double-action instrument—that is, on expanding and compressing the bellows the same note is produced. The tenor, bass, and double-bass concertina are, like the accordion, single-action instruments, producing different notes on expanding and compressing the bellows. Charles Wheatstone patented the concertina in 1829. The German concertina is a less perfect instrument than the English concertina; it is a single-action instrument, and its scale is not chromatic.

Concertina, alto. A concertina having the compass of the viola.

Concertina, bass. A concertina having the compass of the violoncello.

Concertina, soprano. A concertina having the compass of the violin.

Concertino (kōn-tshĕr-tē'nō), It. A small concerto. (2) The opposite of ripieno—namely, principal, or concertante; for instance, violino concertino, principal violin. (3) The name concertino is sometimes applied to a first-violin part in which are entered the obligato passages of the other parts. (V. Concerto grosso.)

Concertiren (kōn-tsĕr-tē'r'n), Ger. To accord, to agree in sound; also a soli movement where each instrument or voice has in its turn the principal part.

Concertmeister (kōn-tsĕrt' mīs'tĕr), Ger. The leader of the orchestra, the first of the first violins.

Concerto (kōn-tshĕr'tō), It. (1) A concert. (2) A composition consisting generally of three, rarely of four, movements, for one or more solo instruments, with orchestral accompaniment. Its form is, on the whole, that of the sonata; its distinctive features are the tutti (the orchestral ritornelli) and certain peculiarities arising from the intention to display the solo instrument and the powers of the player. As one of these peculiarities may be mentioned the cadenzas played by the performer of the solo part just before the concluding tutti of the first and the last movement. (V. Sonata and Cadenza.) The customary tutti, which, for instance, in Mozart's concertos, appear in diffusive fullness, are in more modern times often curtailed or altogether omitted. This is especially the case with the long introductory tutti, which generally presented both the first and the second subject, afterwards taken up by the solo part or solo parts. Also the cadenzas have lost much of their former importance. In other words, the concerto, at one time a show-piece, has more and more become a tone-poem. Concertos without orchestral accompaniment need hardly be mentioned; they are exceptional, and of very rare occurrence.

In its earliest application the word "concerto" was synonymous with "concent," signifying not a definite form, but a composition in parts, either purely vocal or vocal and instrumental. Giuseppe Torelli, who died in 1708, is regarded as the inventor of the modern concerto. The development of the concerto runs parallel, one may say is identical, with that of the sonata. The earlier exemplifications of these forms differ indeed often only in name. With Mozart (1756-1791) the concerto reached, so to speak, maturity. (See the following articles):

Concerto, a solo. A concerto written for the purpose of displaying the powers of a particular instrument, without accompaniment.

Concerto da camera (kōn-tshĕr'tō dä kä'mĕ-rä), It. Chamber concerto. Contra to Concerto grosso.

Concerto di chiesa (kōn-tshĕr'tō dē kē-ā'zä), It. A concerto for church use.

Concertstück (kŏn-tsĕrt'stük), Ger. A concert-piece; a concerto.

Concert pitch. The pitch adopted by general consent for some one given note, and by which every other note is governed. The so-called French normal diapason is now generally adopted, computed from A—435 vibrations per second. This is nearly a half step lower than the concert pitch in use by American piano-makers previous to about 1885.

Concitato (kŏn-tshī-tä'tō), It. Agitated, perturbed.

Conclusione (kŏn-kloo-zĭ-ō'nĕ), It. The conclusion, or winding up.

Con comodo (kŏn kō'mō-dō), It. With ease, in convenient time.

Concord. A harmonious combination of sounds; the opposite to a discord.

Concordant. Agreeing, correspondent, harmonious. Concord depends upon the frequency of coincidences between vibrations of the different tones composing the concord. Hence the most agreeable concord is that of the octave, of which the ratio is 1:2, a coincidence occurring with every vibration of the lower tone. The next is that of the fifth, in which the ratio is 2:3, a coincidence occurring with every second vibration of the lower tone. And so the concords shade off through the intervals of the harmonic series, which follow the ratios 1:2:3:4:5:6:7:8:9:10, etc.

Concordanza (kŏn-kōr-dän'tsä), It. Concorde (kŏn-kōrd), Fr. Concordia (kŏn-kōr'dĭ-ä), It. } Concord, harmony.

Consecutive. A term chiefly applied to progressions of perfect fifths and octaves, which are permissible only under certain conditions or for special purposes. They are most objectionable when the parts which thus offend are extreme parts. Consecutive unisons are likewise prohibited. But the prohibition of consecutive octaves and unisons applies only to individual parts, not to the doubling, reinforcing, of one part by another. Hidden consecutives are discussed in the article Hidden Fifths and Hidden Octaves.

Consecutive fifths. Two or more perfect fifths, immediately following one another in similar motion. Consecutive fifths are disagreeable to the ear, and forbidden by the laws of harmony.

Consecutive octaves. Two parts moving in unison or octaves with each other.

Counterpoint. Point against point. (1) The art of adding one or more parts to a given part. (2) A part or parts added to a given part.

The contrapuntal style is distinguished from the harmonic in this, that whilst the latter consists of a melody accompanied by chords, the former is a simultaneous combination of several melodies, or melodic parts. The supreme contrapuntal forms are Canon and Fugue.

In teaching counterpoint, theorists assume generally five species: (a) Note against note—a semibreve against a semibreve; (b) two notes against one—two minims against a semibreve; (c) four notes against one—four crotchets against a semibreve; (d) syncopated counterpoint—the second minim of one bar tied to the first of the following bar against a semibreve entering on the first part of each bar; (e) florid counterpoint—a mixture of the three preceding species.

Further, counterpoint is divisible into simple and double counterpoint. The latter differs from the former in this, that its parts are invertible, i. e., may be transposed an octave, or ninth, tenth, twelfth, etc., above or below one another. Counterpoint is called triple when three, and quadruple when four parts are mutually invertible.

Counterpoint, double. A counterpoint that admits of an inversion of the parts.

Counterpoint, equal. Where the notes are of equal duration.

Counter subject. (1) The second theme in double fugues and fugues with two subjects in distinction from the principal subject. (2) The subject accompanying the answer (the resumption by one part of the subject proposed by another) of a fugue. But the accompaniment of the answer gets this name only when it is retained throughout the fugue. (3) A melody forming a counterpoint against a cantus firmus.

Counter tenor. Male alto voice. (V. Alto.)

Counter tenor. High tenor; the highest male voice. It is generally a falsetto.

Counter tenor clef. The C clef, when placed on the third line.

Counter theme. See Counter subject.

Country dance. Whether "country" means here simply "rustic," or has to be regarded as a corruption of "contra," is still a matter of controversy. But whatever the right interpretation may be, a country dance is a contra dance. One writer defines it as "a dance in which partners are arranged opposite to each other." Another writer, after remarking that at the commencement the gentlemen are arranged on one side and the ladies on the other, proceeds thus in his description of the dance: "In its figures the dancers are constantly changing places, leading one another back and forward, up and down, parting and uniting again. The numerous different figures, which give an interest to this dance, are generally designated with a particular name. The music is sometimes in 2-4 and sometimes in 6-8 time" ("Chambers's Encyclopædia"). To this has, however, to be added that these are the most common, but not the only times in which country-dance tunes have been composed.

Discord. A dissonant interval, an interval that does not satisfy the ear, but causes unrest. The opposite of a discord is a concord. (2) A chord which contains one or more dis-sonant intervals, and which, on account of its unsatisfying and disquieting effect, requires to be resolved into a consonant chord. (V. Introduction.) The foregoing are the uses of this term, as popularly employed. Properly speaking, however, discord is an unmusical, inharmonious effect, which may go far beyond the limits of the permissible. Any inharmonious combination. A Dissonance is a discordant combination musically employed. Inasmuch as consonance depends upon appreciable relations between the tones so related, dissonance and discord depend upon the clashing of vibrations and the inability of the ear to find a common measure or principle of unity. These clashings take place in dissonance (q. v.), but the manner in which a dissonance is used suggests to the ear the resolution, the later entrance of the concordant tone which the dissonance had temporarily displaced.

Discordant. A term applied to all discordant or inharmonious sounds.

Discordante (dĭs-kōr-dän'tĕ), It. Discordant.

Disposition. The arrangement of the stops in an organ, disposing them according to power, quality of tone, etc. (2) Estimate as to cost and appointment of an organ.

Dissonance. The inharmonious relation of tones. (See Discord.) Strictly speaking, dissonance is the musical employment of discord. All harmonic combinations are dissonant in greater or less degree, except the unison, octave, major and minor thirds and sixths, the perfect fifth, and harmonic seventh. All dissonances are employed as temporary substitutes for consonants, in order to render the harmonic motion more emphatic and appealing. The disappearance of the dissonance is generally effected by the voice having it progressing one degree to the consonant tone displaced. Most dissonances are either Suspensions, held over out of a previous chord, Appoggiaturas, struck free upon the beat but resolved upon the half beat, Passing tones, introduced in passing by degrees from one chord tone to another, or Changing tones, where a voice skips off to a dissonant tone and immediately returns.

Dissonant chords. All the chords except the perfect concord and its derivatives.

Falsch singen (fälsh sĭng'ĕn), Ger. To sing out of tune.

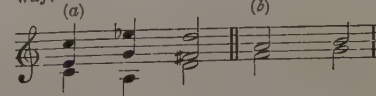
False. Those intonations of the voice that do not truly express the intended intervals are called false, as well as all ill-adjusted combinations. The term false is applied in music to any violation of acknowledged or long-established rules, or to anything imperfect or incorrect.

False accent. When the accent is removed from the first beat of the bar to the second or fourth, it is called false accent.

False cadence. An imperfect or interrupted cadence.

False fifth. An old term for an imperfect or diminished fifth; a fifth containing only six semitones, as C, G♭.

False relation. The principal and most objectionable kind of false relation arises where a note which has appeared in one part reappears immediately after in another part chromatically altered—i. e., a semitone flattened or sharpened (a). As numerous examples in our best composers show, such progressions have by no means always a bad effect. Another kind of false relation is the occurrence of the tritonus (an augmented fourth or diminished fifth) between the first note of the one and the second note of the other of two progressive parts. Hence the strict prohibition by the old theorists of the progression of two major thirds (b). The practice and teaching of more modern times deals with this matter in a high-handed way.



False triad. The diminished triad, formerly so called on account of its having a false fifth.

Falsett (fäl-sĕt'), Ger. } Falsetto. (1) The Falsetto (fäl-sĕt'tō), It. } head voice, as distinguished from the chest voice. (2) A singer who sings soprano or alto parts with such a voice. Falsetti must not be confounded with castrati.

Falso bordone (fäl'sō bōr-dō-nĕ), It. What the French call Faux-bourdon and the English Fa-burden. There are several kinds of falso bordone. The most important are: (1) The early manner of accompanying a melody (cantus firmus) in thirds and sixths, with the exception of the first and last note, with which the highest part took the octave and the middle part generally the fifth of the tenor—i. e., the part which "holds" the cantus firmus. Or the melody (cantus firmus) was in the highest part, and was accompanied by fourths and sixths below, except at the close, where the lowest part took the octave. (2) Rhythmically unmeasured vocal compositions in simple counterpoint, consisting of progressions of consonant chords, whose even course, however, is interrupted at the cadences by prepared suspensions.

Fantaisie (fän-tā-zē), Fr. } Fantasy, fancy,
Fantasia (fän-tä-zē'ä), It. } caprice, whim. (1)
Fantasie (fän-tä-sē'), Ger. } The name of Fantasia is given to various kinds of composition—to preludes consisting of a few arpeggios and runs, to lengthy works full of thought and learning, to potpourris of operatic tunes, etc., which, however, all agree in being free in style, not restricted by any definite form. (2) An improvisation. (3) The instrumental pieces called Fantasias (also written Fantazias and Phantasias), Fancies (or Fansies), etc., were at first mostly of a fugal nature. Those which Dr. Burney had in his possession were for viols, and "consisted more of motets, madrigals, and in nomines (q. v.), originally designed for voices, than of fantasie made expressly for instruments." Christopher Simpson writes in 1667 that "this kind of music is now much neglected, by reason of the scarcity of auditors that understand it; their ears being better acquainted and more delighted with light, airy music." He names as the best composers of Fancies in England, Alfonso Ferabosco, Coperario, Lupo, Mico, White, Ward, Dr. Colman, and Jenkins. (4) We find the term Fancies also applied to vocal compositions and to short, lively tunes.

Figured. Free, florid; a term applied to an air which, instead of moving note by note with the bass, consists of a free and florid melody. It also means indicated or noted by figures.

Figured bass. A shorthand system of noting harmonies. It consists of a bass part with figures which indicate the principal intervals of the intended chords. In the case of triads, unless they are inverted, the bass is generally left without figures. Accidentals affect the corresponding intervals of the figures beside which they stand. An accidental standing by itself affects the third above the bass note. A stroke through a figure shows that the interval is sharpened a semitone. An oblique stroke under or above a bass note indicates that not the note thus marked, but the following one, is the basis of the harmony to be taken; horizontal lines indicate that a harmony has to be continued whilst the bass proceeds, and the words tasto solo or the sign o indicate that nothing but the bass notes is to be played.

Figures of diminution. Numerical characters which diminish the duration of the notes over which they are placed. Three notes with a figure three are called triplets, where there are two triplets a figure six is used.

Fluit (floit), Dut. }
Fluta (floo'tä), Lat. } A flute.

Fluepipes. Those organ-pipes (metal as well as wooden) which are made to sound by forcing the wind through a slit (the windway) at the top of the foot, and against a sharp edge (the upper lip), which divides the wind, part of which only enters the body of the pipe. The fluework is the aggregate of such pipes.

Flute. An organ-stop of the flue species, the tone of which resembles that of the flute.

Flute. There are two kinds of flute: the flûte à bec (beak flute), or direct flute, and the flûte traversière, or cross flute: the former has a plugged mouthpiece at one end of the tube, the latter is blown through a lateral hole. Excepting the flageolet, the flûte à bec has entirely disappeared, at least among the art-producing European nations. The instrument understood when we now speak of the flute is the cross flute, also called German flute. It is generally made of wood, sometimes of metal, and consists of a conical tube, stopped at its wider end, and provided with six fingerholes and a number of keys. As improved by Boehm, it has a compass from c′ to c′′′′. Music for this instrument, which is one of the most important members of the orchestra, is written as it sounds. A small, or octave, flute, the flauto piccolo (with a compass from d″ to a′′′′; written d′—a′′′) is also sometimes used in the orchestra. In military bands flutes in E♭ and in F, and small flutes an octave higher, are to be met with. Now flutes are also made cylindrical and of ebonite. The so-called flute of ancient Greek music was not a true flute, but a sort of imperfect oboe. Of the same nature, probably, were the double flutes, figured upon ancient monuments, consisting of two tubes, diverging from each other at an acute angle. It is not certainly known whether both tubes were sounded simultaneously, and if so, whether the resulting effect was that of a melody with harmony or a melody with a drone bass, but the latter is regarded as more probable from the circumstance of similar flutes being still extant in Abyssinia and elsewhere.

Flute, Fr. The same as flautando and flautato (q. v.).

Flute à bec (floot ä bĕk), Fr. "Beak flute." A direct flute. It has a beak-shaped mouthpiece with a plug which leaves only a narrow aperture for the breath to pass through. There was a whole family of flûtes à bec, bass, tenor, alto, etc. (V. Flute.)

Flute allemande (floot ăl-mänhd), Fr. The German flute.

Flute, Boehm (böm). A perfected flute, invented by M. Boehm, of Germany, in 1832. It differs from the common flute in having the size and location of the holes arranged in their natural order with keys.

Flute conique (floot kŏn-ēk), Fr. Conical flute; an organ-stop.

Fugitive pieces. Ephemeral, short-lived compositions.

Fugue. This word is derived from the Latin fuga, flight, and a certain kind of musical composition has been called thus because "one part, as it were, tries to flee and escape from the others; but it is pursued by them, until they afterwards meet in an amicable way, and finally come to a satisfactory understanding." The technical description must necessarily be less simple than this poetical one.

There are fugues for instruments, for voices and for instruments and voices combined. A fugue may be in two, three, four, five, and more parts. The word fugue had not always the same meaning as in our time and since the days of J. S. Bach and Handel, the masters of masters; but it always signified an imitative form—a canon or something more or less like what we call a fugue. Various kinds of fugues are enumerated under fuga with its accompanying epithets. A fugue, in its final evolution, consists of an exposition and two or more developments, which generally are connected by episodes. In a fugue in four parts the exposition is somewhat like this: One part proposes the subject; a second part follows with the answer (i. e., the imitation of the subject at the fifth above or fourth below); a third part resumes the subject an octave higher or lower than the part which commenced; and a fourth part brings up the rear with the answer an octave higher or lower than the part which was second in the order of succession. The counterpoint with which the part that first enunciates the subject accompanies the answer is called countersubject, but it is properly so called only when it recurs as an accompaniment with the subsequent enunciations of the subject and answer. Sometimes the subject and countersubject are simultaneously introduced. When after an episode, short or long, the first development begins, the subject is taken up and answered by the parts in another order of succession. Supposing the alto to have begun before, the tenor or soprano or bass will begin now. Further, the imitations will be at different intervals of pitch and time. The drawing closer together of the subject and its answer, so that the latter begins before the former has completed its course, is called the stretto. This contrivance is especially resorted to in the last development. Other contrivances that may be utilized are the augmentation, diminution, inversion, and retrogression of the subject. The stretto is frequently followed by a pedal-point, on which the subject is piled up in various layers, so as to form a striking conclusion to the whole. The matter out of which the episodes are wrought may be new, but oftener (in order to insure unity) is derived from the subject, countersubject, or other accompaniments of the subject.

An important division of fugues remains yet to be noticed, namely, that into real and tonal fugues. A real fugue is one in which the answer is an exact transposition of the subject; a tonal fugue is one in which the answer is an imitation of the subject slightly modified for the purpose of keeping within the same key.

Two words often heard in connection with fugues may be here explained. Coda, or codetta, is the name given to the notes which are appended to the subject when at its conclusion the answer does not strike in at once. Repercussion is the reappearance of the subject and answer in a new order with regard to succession and pitch in the various developments of a fugue.

Double, triple, and quadruple fugues are fugues with two, three, and four subjects. Two kinds of double fugue have to be distinguished: (1) That in which two subjects are first separately worked out and only subsequently combined. (2) That in which the second subject enters at once with the first subject as a constant countersubject. See, also, under Fuga.

Fugue, counter. A fugue in which the subjects move in contrary directions.

Fugue, double. A fugue on two subjects.

Fugue renversée (füg rănh-vĕr-sā'), Fr. A fugue, the answer in which is made in contrary motion to that of the subject.

Fugue, strict. A fugue in which the fugal form and its laws are strictly observed.

Gondoliera (gŏn-dō-lē-ä'rä), It. A gondola-song; a song with an easy-rocking motion, à la the movement of a gondola.

Gondolier-songs. Songs composed and sung by the Venetian gondoliers, of a very graceful and pleasing style; barcarolles.

Gong. A Chinese instrument of the pulsatile kind, consisting of a large circular plate of metal, which, when struck, produces an exceedingly loud noise.

Gorgheggiamento (gōr-gād-jĭ-ä-mĕn'tō), It. Trilling, quavering.

Gorgheggiare (gōr-gād-jĭ-ä'rĕ), It. To trill, to shake.

Gorgheggio (gōr-gād'jĭ-ō), It. A trill, a shake of the voice in singing.

Gout (goo), Fr. Taste, style, judgment.

Governing key. The principal key; that key in which a piece is written.

Grabgesang (gräb'gĕ-säng), Grablied (gräb'lēd), Ger. } Dirge; funeral-song.

Grace note. Any note added to a composition as an embellishment.

Graces. Ornamental notes and embellishments, either written by the composer or introduced by the performer. The principal embellishments are the appoggiatura, the turn, and the shake or trill.

Gracieux (grä-sĭ-ŭh), Fr. Graceful.

Gracile (grä'tshĭ-lĕ), It. Thin, weak, small; referring to the tone.

Gracioso (grä-thĭ-ō'zō), Sp. Graceful.

Grad (grăd), Ger. Steps, degree. See Grado.

Gradare (grä-dä'rĕ), It. To descend step by step.

Gradatamente (grä-dä-tä-mĕn'tĕ), It. } By de-Gradation (grä-dā-sē-ōnh), Fr. } grees, a Gradazione (grä-dä-tsī-ō'nĕ), It. } gradual increase or diminution of speed or intensity of tone.

Gradevole (grä-dā'vō-lĕ),
Gradevolmente (grä-dā-vōl-mĕn'tĕ), It. } Gracefully, pleasingly.

Gradire (grä-dē'rĕ), It. To ascend step by step.

Graditamente (grä-dī-tä-mĕn'tĕ), It. In a pleasing manner.

Graditissimo (grä-dī-tēs'sī-mō), It. Very sweetly, most gracefully.

Gradleiter (grăd'lī-tĕr), Ger. A scale.

Grado (grä'dō), It. A degree, or single step, on the staff; di grado means that the melody moves by degrees, ascending or descending, in opposition to di salto, by skips of greater intervals.

Grado ascendente (grä'dō ä-shĕn-dĕn'tĕ), It. A descending degree.

Grado descendente (grä'dō dā-shĕn-dĕn'tĕ), It. A descending degree.

Grados (grä-dōs), Sp. Musical intervals.

Gradual. That part of the Roman Catholic service that is sung between the Epistle and the Gospel, and which was anciently sung on the steps of the altar.

Gradualmente (grä-doo-äl-mĕn'tĕ)
Graduatamente (grä-doo-ä-tä-mĕn'tĕ), It. } Gradually, by degrees or steps.

Gradus ad Parnassum (grä'doos äd pär-näs'soom), Lat. The road to Parnassus. This name was applied by the contrapuntist Fux to his elaborate textbook in counterpoint. Also by Clementi to his collection of 100 pieces for the higher art of piano-playing. The latter work is very important.

Gradual modulation. Modulation in which some chord is taken before the modulating chord, which may be considered as belonging to the original key or the new key.

Graduare (grä-doo-ä'rĕ), It. To divide into degrees.

Graduazione (grä-doo-ä-tsī-ō'nĕ), It. See Gradazione.

Graduellement (grä-dwăl'mänh), Fr. } Gradu-Gradweise (grăd'wī-zĕ), Ger. } ally, by degrees.

Grail (grāl). The Gradual.

Graillement (grā-mänh), Fr. A hoarse sound.

Grammar, musical. The rules by which musical compositions are governed.

Grammatical accent. The common-measure accent, marked by the length of the words, and a regular succession of strong and weak parts.

Gran (grän),
Grande (grän'dĕ), It. } Great, grand.

Gran cantore (grän kän-tō'rĕ), It. A fine singer.

Gran cassa (grän käs'sä), It. The great drum.

Grand-barré (gränh-bär-rā'), Fr. In guitar-playing this means laying the first finger of the left hand upon all the six strings of the guitar at once.

Grand bourdon. Great or double bourdon; an organ-stop of 32-feet tone in the pedal.

Grand chantre (gränh shäntr), Fr. A precentor.

Grand chœur (grän kür), Fr. Full organ; all the stops.

Grand choir. In organ-playing, the union of all the reed-stops.

Grand cornet. This name is sometimes given to a reed-stop of 16-feet scale on the manuals of an organ.

Grande messe (gränhd māss), Fr. High Mass.

Grande mesure a deux temps (gränhd mäzhür ä dü tänh), Fr. Common time of two beats in a bar, marked 2-2, or sometimes 4-4, or $\frac{\mathbf{C}}{\mathbf{2}}$. See, also, Alla cappella.

Grandezza (grän-dĕt'sä), It. Grandeur, dignity.

Grandioso (grän-dī-ō'zō), It. Grand, noble.

Grandisonante (grän-dī-zō-nän'tĕ), It. Very sonorous, full-sounding.

Grand jeu (grän zhüh), Fr. Full organ. Applied to harmoniums. Also the name of a stop which brings on all the reeds at once.

Grand opera. Italian opera; a full opera with an intricate plot and full cast of performers.

Grand orgue (gränh dōrg), Fr. Great organ.

Grand pianoforte. A pianoforte in which nearly all the octaves have three strings to each tone, tuned in unison, and struck at once by the same hammer.

Grand sonata. An extended sonata, consisting generally of four movements.

Gran gusto (grän goos'tō), It. In a lofty, elevated manner, a full, rich, high-wrought composition. The manner of a fine and great singer is said to be in the gran gusto.

Gran prova (grän prō'vä), It. The last rehearsal.

Gran tamburo (grän täm-boo'rō), It. The great drum.

Grappa (grän'pä), It. The brace, or character, used to connect two or more staves.

Gratias agimus (grä'tsī-äs ä'gī-moos), Lat. Part of the Gloria in a mass. "We give thanks to Thee."

Grave (grä'vĕ), It. A slow and solemn movement; also a deep, low pitch in the scale of sounds.

Gravement (grăv-mänh), Fr. } With grav-Gravemente (grä-vĕ-mĕn'tĕ), It. } ity, in a dignified and solemn manner.

Gravezza (grä-vĕt'tsä), It. Gravity, solemnity.

Gravicembalo (grä-vē-tshĕm'bä-lō), It. } An Gravicembolo (grä-vē-tshĕm'bō-lō), } old name for the harpsichord.

Gravis (grä'vĭs), Lat. Heavy, ponderous. The name of one of the accentus ecclesiastici.

Gravisonante (grä-vĭ-zō-nän'tĕ), It. Loud-sounding.

Gravita (grä-vĭ-tä'), It.
Gravität (grä-fi-tät'), Ger.
Gravité (grä-vĭ-tā'), Fr. } Gravity, majesty.

Gravity. That modification of any sound by which it becomes deep or low in respect to some other sound. The gravity of sounds depends in general on the mass, extent, and tension of the sonorous bodies. The larger and more lax the bodies, the slower will be the vibrations and the graver the sounds.

Grazia (grä'tsĭ-ä), It.
Grazie (grä'tsĭ-ĕ), Ger. } Grace, elegance.

Graziosamente (grä-tsĭ-ō-zä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Gracefully, smoothly.

Grazioso (grä-tsĭ-ō'zō), It. In a graceful style.

Greater scale. Major scale.

Greater sixth. A name sometimes given to the major sixth.

Greater third. A name sometimes given to the major third.

Great octave. The name given in Germany to the notes between C and B inclusive. These notes are expressed by capital letters.

Great organ. In an organ with three rows of keys, usually the middle row, so called because containing the greatest number of stops, and having its pipes of large scale and voiced louder than those in the swell, or choir, organ.

Great sixth. The appellation given to the chord of the fifth and sixth when the fifth is perfect and the sixth major.

Greek modes. The ancient Greek modes or scales were twelve in number; of these, six were authentic and six plagal. The sounds are supposed to have been somewhat similar to those in the scale of C, and the differences in mode due to the selection of a point of repose.

Gregorian chant. A style of choral music, according to the eight celebrated church modes introduced by Pope Gregory in the sixth century.

Gregorianisch (grĕ-gō-rĭ-än'ĭsh), Ger. Gregorian.

Gregorianischer Gesang (grĕ-gō-rĭ-än'ĭsh-ĕr), Ger. The Gregorian chant.

Gregorian modes. } The eight tunes, or Gregorian tones. } tones, authorized by St. Gregory for use in intoning the religious offices. Part of them are still in the plain song (q. v.).

Gregoriano (grä-gō-rĭ-ä'nō), It.
Gregorien (grä-gō-rĭ-änh), Fr. } Gregorian.

Grell (grĕll), Ger. Shrill, acute.

Grellheit (grĕl'hĭt), Ger. Sharpness. shrillness.

Grelot (grä-lō), Fr. A small bell.

Griffbret (grĭff'brĕt), Ger, The fingerboard of a violin, violoncello, etc.

Griffloch (grĭf'lōkh), Ger. The holes of a flute and like instruments.

Grillig (grĭl'lĭg), Ger. Capricious, fanciful.

Gringotter (gränh-gō-tā'), Fr. To quaver, to warble.

Grisoller (grē-zō-lā'), Fr. To sing like a lark

Grob (grōb), Ger. Deep, low voice, bass.

Grobgedackt (grōb'ghĕ-däkht'), Ger. Large stopped diapason of full tone.

Groppetto (grōp-pĕt'tō), It. See Gruppetto.

Groppo (grōp'pō), It. A group of notes, a rapid vocal passage.

Gros-fa. A name formerly given to old church music in square notes, semibreves, and minims.

Grossartig (grōs'är-tĭg), Ger. Grand.

Grosse (grōs'sĕ), Ger. Major, speaking of intervals; also grand in respect to style.

Grosse caisse (grōs käss), Fr. The great drum.

Grosse Nazard (grōs'sĕ nä-tsärd'), Ger. An organ-stop, sounding a fifth above the diapasons.

Grosse Quinte (grōs'sĕ quĭn'tĕ), Grosses Quintenbass (grōs'sĕs quĭn't'n-bäss), } Ger.
An organ-stop in the pedals sounding a fifth or twelfth to the great bass of 32 feet or 16 feet.

Grosse Sonate (grōs'sĕ sō-nä'tĕ), Ger. pl. Grand sonatas.

Grosses Principal (grōs'sĕs prĭn-tsĭ-päl'), Ger. An organ-stop of 32-feet scale of the open diapason species.

Grosse Terz (grōs'sĕ tärtz), Ger. Great third. The major third.

Grosse Tierce (grōs'sĕ tēr'sĕ), Ger. Great third sounding-stop in an organ, producing the third or tenth, above the foundation stops.

Grosse Trommel (grōs'sĕ trōm'm'l), Ger. The great drum.

Grossgedackt (grōs'ghĕ-däkt'), Ger. Double stopped diapason of 16-feet tone in an organ

Grosso (grōs'sō), It. Full, great, grand.

Grossvatertanz (grōs'fä-tēr-tänts'), Ger. Grand father's dance; an old-fashioned dance.

Gros tambour (grō tänh-boor), Fr. The great drum.

Grottesco (grōt-tĕs'kō), It. Grotesque.

Ground bass. A bass consisting of a few simple notes, intended as a theme, on which, at each repetition, a new melody is constructed, so that the entire composition rests upon this single foundation. Example: Bach's Passacaglia in C minor, for organ.

Group. Several short notes tied together.

Grundakkord (groond'äk-kōrd), Ger. An uninverted chord.

Grundstimme (groond'stĭm-mĕ), Ger. The bass part.

Grundton (groond-tōn), Ger. The bass note; fundamental, or principal, tone.

Gruppetto (groop-pĕt'tō), It. A turn; also a small group of grace, or ornamental, notes.

Gruppe (groop'pĕ), Ger. } A group of notes;
Groppo (groop'pō), It. } formerly it meant a trill, shake, or turn.

G-Schlüssel (gā'shlüs-s'l), Ger. The G, or treble, clef.

Guaracha (gwä-räk'ä), Sp. A Spanish dance.

Guarantta (gwä rä-nē'tä), Sp. A variety of the Spanish guitar.

Guarnerius (gwar-nā'rĭ-ŭs). A make of violin highly prized, so called from the name of the manufacturer.

Guddok (goo-dōk), Rus. A rustic violin with three strings, used among the Russian peasantry.

Guerriero (goo-ĕr-rĭ-ā'rō), It. Martial, warlike.

Guet (gā), Fr. A military trumpet piece.

Guia (ghē-ä), Sp. Fugue, conductor, leader.

Guida (gwē'dä), It. Guide; also the mark called a direct ~.

Guide. That note in a fugue which leads off and announces the subject.

Guide-main (ghēd mănh), Fr. The hand-guide, an instrument invented by Kalkbrenner for assisting young players to acquire a good position of the hands on the pianoforte.

Guidon (ghē-dŏnh), Fr. The mark called a direct.

Guidonian hand. The figure of a left hand used by Guido, and upon which was marked the names of the sounds forming his three hexachords.

Guidonian syllables. The syllables ut, re, mi, fa, sol, la, used by Guido d'Arezzo, and called the Aretinian scale.

Guido's gamut. The table, or scale, introduced by Guido Aretinus about 1050, and to the notes of which he applied the syllables ut, re, mi, fa, sol, la. It consisted of twenty notes, viz., two octaves and a major sixth, the first octave being distinguished by capital letters, the second by small letters, and the sixth by double small letters.

Guigue (goo-ē'ghĕ), It. See Giga.

Guiltern. See Gittern.

Guimbarde (ghēm-bärd'), Fr. A jew's-harp.

Guion (ghē-ōn), Sp. A sign indicating that the piece or passage is to be repeated.

Guitar. A long-necked instrument which in modern times has been strung generally with six strings, and whose fingerboard is provided with frets. The strings, which are plucked with the fingers of the right hand, are tuned in E A d g b e', but as guitar music is written an octave higher than it sounds, their notation is as follows:

Guitare (ghĭ-tär'), Fr.
Guitarre (ghē-tär'rĕ), Sp.
Guitarre (ghĭ-tär'rĕ), Ger. } A guitar.

Guitare d'amour (ghē-tär d'ä-moor), Fr. An instrument (invented by Georg Staufer, of Vienna, in 1823) with six strings, tuned like those of the guitar, but played with a bow. In some of its features it resembles the guitar in others the violoncello. It has, not inaptly, been described as a viola bastarda. The Germans call it, also, Bogenguitarre (bow-guitar), Knieguitarre (knee-guitar), and Violoncellguitarre (violoncello-guitar).

Guitare d'amour (ghē-tär d'ä-moor'), Fr. A modification of the German guitar.

Guitarre lyre (ghē-tär lērh), Fr. A French instrument having six strings and formed somewhat like an ancient lyre.

Guiterne (ghē-tärn'), Fr. An ancient species of lute or guitar.

Gunst (goonst), Ger. Grace, tenderness, favor.

Guracho (goo-rä-kō), Sp. See Guarache.

Gusto (goos'tō), It. Taste, expression.

Gustosamente (goos-tō-zä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Tastefully, expressively.

Gustoso (goos-tō'zō), It. Expressive, tasteful.

G ut. A name applied by Guido to the tone large G, because this tone was the lowest of the whole system of tones.

Gutdünken (goot'dün-k'n), Ger. At pleasure, according to the taste of the performer.

Guttural. Formed in the throat, pertaining to the throat.

Gutturalmente (goot-too-räl-mĕn'tĕ), It. Gutturally.

H

H. This letter is used by the Germans for B-natural, which note is called by the French and Italians si. Abbreviation for Hand.

Habanera (hä-bä'nĕ-rä), Sp. A slow Spanish dance in 3-4 time; a dance.

Haberrohr (hä'bĕr-rōr), Ger. Shepherd's flute.

Hackbrett (häk'brĕt), Ger. The dulcimer.

Halb (hälb), Ger. Half.

Halbcadence (hälb-kä-dĕn'tsĕ), Ger. Half-cadence.

Halbgedackt (hälb'gĕ-däkt), Ger. Half-covered. Applied to the rohrflöte and clarinet-flute stops in organs.

Halbnote (hälb-nō'tĕ), Ger. A minim, or half-note.

Halbprincipal (hälb'prĭn-tsĭ-päl'), Ger. An organ-stop of four-feet pitch, and consequently an octave higher than the pitch of the open diapason.

Halbton (hälb'tōn), Ger. Half-tone, semitone.

Half-cadence. An imperfect cadence, a close on the dominant.

Half-note. A minim.

Half-note rest. A pause equal in duration to a half-note.

Half-shift. The first shift on a violin; that on the fifth line.

Half-step. The smallest interval used in music.

Hall (häll), Ger. Sound, clangor, clang.

Halle (häl'lĕ), Ger. Hall.

Hallelujah (häl-lĕ-loo'yah), Heb. "Praise ye the Lord"; a song of thanksgiving.

Hallelujah meter. A stanza in six lines of iambic measure, the syllables of each being in number and order as follows: 6, 6, 6, 6, 8, 8.

Hallen (häl'l'n), Ger. To sound, to clang.

Halltrompete (häll'trōm-pē'tĕ), Ger. A powerful trumpet.

Halmpfeife (hälm-pfī'fĕ), Ger. Shepherd's pipe.

Hals (häls), Ger. Neck of a violin, viola, etc.

Halt (hält), Ger. A pause; a hold.

Hammer. That part of the action or mechanism of a pianoforte which strikes the strings and thus produces the sound.

Hammer, tuning. An instrument by which pianos and harps are tuned, by tightening or loosening the strings.

Hammerklavier (häm'mĕr-klä-fēr'), Ger. The modern piano.

Hanakische (hä-na'kĭ-shĕ), Ger. A hanacca. A Moravian dance in 3-4 measure, somewhat resembling a polonaise, but quicker.

Hände (hän'dĕ), Ger. Hands.

Handlage (händ-lä'gĕ), Ger. The position of the hand.

Handleiter (händ-lī'tĕr), Ger. Handguide. See Guide.

Hand organ. A portable instrument consisting of a cylinder, on which by means of wires, pins, and staples are set the tunes, the revolution of the cylinder causing the pins, etc., to act on the keys and also to give admission to the wind.

Handstücke (händ'stü-kĕ), Ger. Hand pieces, exercises for training the fingers in piano-playing.

Hardiment (här-dĭ-mänh), Fr. Boldly, firmly.

Harfe (här'fĕ), Ger. A harp.

Harfen (här'f'n), Ger. To play on the harp.

Harfenbass (här'fĕn-bäss), Ger. A bass like a harp; broken chords.

Harfensaite (här'fĕn-sä'ĭ'tĕ), Ger. Harp-string.

Harfenspieler (här-f'n-spē'lĕr), Ger. Harp-player.

Harmonia (här-mō'nĭ-ä), Lat. A daughter of Mars and Venus. Her name was first used to indicate music in general.

Harmonic. Concordant, musical.

Harmonica. A musical instrument invented by Benjamin Franklin, consisting of glasses, sometimes globular and sometimes flat. The tone is produced by rubbing the edge of the globular glasses with a moistened finger, or striking the flat ones with small hammers. The name is also applied to an organ-stop of delicate tone.

Harmonica-ätherisch (här-mō'nĭ-kä-ā'tĕr-ĭsh), Ger. A mixture stop of very delicate scale in German organs.

Harmonical trumpet. An instrument very much like a trumpet, except that it is longer and consists of more branches; the sackbut.

Harmonic figuration. The progression from one tone to another of the same chord by means of passing tones, thence passing in the same manner through successive different chords.

Harmonic flute. An open metal organ-stop, of 8- or 4-feet pitch; the pipes are of double length, that is, 16 or 8 feet, and the bodies have a hole bored in them midway between the foot and the top; the tone is exceedingly full, fluty, and powerful.

Harmonichord. An instrument having the form of an upright piano, but a tone something like that of a violin, produced by the friction of a cylinder covered with leather upon the strings. It was invented in 1785 by Fr. Kaufman.

Harmonici (här-mŏ'nĭ-tshē), It. pl. Harmonics in violin music.

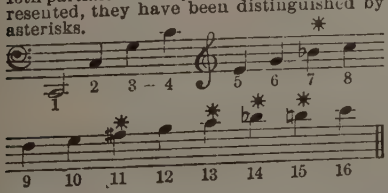
Harmonic mark. A sign used in violin, harp music, etc., to indicate that certain passages are to be played upon such parts of the open strings as will produce the harmonic sounds, ○.

Harmonicon. A small instrument held in the hand, the sounds being produced from small metal springs set in motion by blowing from the mouth.

Harmonics. (1) The sounds produced by the vibrations of divisions (aliquot parts) of a string, column of air, etc. Simple sounds are very rare. What we regard as one sound is in reality a compound of a multiplicity of sounds produced by a multiplicity of various simultaneous vibrational forms. If, for instance, an impact is given to a string, it vibrates not only in its full length but at the same time also in divisions. The vibrations of the full length of the string give the fundamental tone, the doubly-quick vibrations of the halves of the string give the octave above the fundamental tone, the trebly-quick vibrations of the string the fifth above the octave, and so on. The several tones which make up the compound sound are called partial tones, or partials; the lowest of them is called fundamental tone, prime, or principal tone; those above the fundamental tone are called the upper partial tones, upper partials, overtones, or harmonics. The fundamental tone is generally the loudest of the partial tones, and with it the upper partials blend so as to be indistinguishable, or only in part distinguishable under certain conditions. The number and relative strength of the partial tones vary in the different classes of instruments and voices and in the different individuals of the same class; it is on the number and the relative strength of the partials that the timbre (quality, character of tone) of instruments and voices chiefly depends. In the following illustration, which shows the first sixteen partial tones of the sound C, the figures indicate the sequence of the partials in the series, and also the relative number of their vibrations in a given time. As the actual sounds of the 7th, 11th, 13th, 14th, and 15th partials can only be approximately represented, they have been distinguished by asterisks.



(2) Harmonics is also the name given to certain tones produced on the violin, harp, and other stringed instruments, tones which owe another name—flageolet tones—to their peculiar character. By touching a vibrating string very lightly in the middle, or at a point a third, fourth, fifth, etc., of its length distant from one of its ends (i. e., from the nut or the bridge) it is made to vibrate in two, three, four, five, etc., divisions, and the result are notes respectively an octave, twelfth, fifteenth, seventeenth, nineteenth, etc., higher than the tone obtained from the open string—i. e., by its full-length vibration.

Harmonic stops. Organ-stops whose pipes, owing to greater pressure of wind, do not produce their fundamental tones, but the first harmonic—i. e., the tone an octave above the fundamental tone. Such stops are the Flûte octaviante and Flûte harmonique.

Harmonic triad. The common chord, consisting of a fundamental note, its third and fifth.

Harmonie (här-mō-nē'), Fr. } Harmony.
Harmonie (här-mō-nē'), Ger. }

Harmoniemusik (här-mō-nē'moo-zēk'), Ger. A military band consisting of brass instruments. The brass in the orchestra. Music for wind instruments only.

Harmonieusement (här-mō-nĭ-ŭs-mänh), Fr. Harmoniously.

Harmonieux (här-mō-nĭ-ŭh'), Fr. Harmonious.

Harmonious. A term applicable to any two or more sounds which form a consonant or agreeable union.

Harmoniphon. A small instrument with a keyboard like a pianoforte, invented in 1837, and intended to supply the place of hautboys in an orchestra. The sounds are produced from small metal tongues acted upon by a current of air through a flexible tube.

Harmonique (här-mō-nēk), Fr. Harmonic; the relation of sounds to each other; also applied to organ-pipes of double length.

Harmoniquement (här-mō-nēk-mänh), Fr. Harmonically.

Harmoniren (här-mō-nē'r'n), Ger. To harmonize, to be in unison.

Harmonisch (här-mŏ'nĭsh), Ger. Harmonious, harmonical.

Harmonische Theilung (här-mŏ'nĭ-shĕ tī-loong), Ger. Harmonical division.

Harmonist. One acquainted with the science of harmony.

Harmonium. A keyboard wind instrument of the reed-organ kind, the tones of which are produced by the vibration of free reeds. (V. Reeds.) The bellows are worked, except in very large harmoniums, by the performer by means of two pedals (treadles). Small harmoniums have only one set of reeds, i. e., one reed to each note; larger harmoniums have several sets. These different sets of reeds, varied in tone, are brought into play by drawing out corresponding stops. The 'expression-stop" closes a valve which shuts off the wind-reservoir, and thus the whole management of the wind is given into the hands (literally, to the feet) of the performer, who, by the greater or lesser quantity of wind furnished by him, can play more or less loud, increase and decrease the tone at pleasure. The harmonium differs from the reed organ in having a pressure-bellows, forcing the air out through the reeds.

Harmonize. To combine two or more parts according to the laws of harmony.

Harmonized. A melody is said to be harmonized when additional parts are subjoined in order to give it more fullness.

Harmonometre (här-mŏ-nŏ-mätr'), Fr. An instrument to measure the proportion of sounds; a species of monochord.

Harmony. The agreement or consonance of two or more united sounds. The art of combining sounds into chords and treating those chords according to certain rules.

Harmony, figured. Harmony in which, for the purpose of melody, one or more of the parts of a composition move, during the continuance of a chord, through certain notes that do not form any of the constituent parts of that chord.

Harmony, natural. The harmonic triad of common chord.

Harmony, suspended. One or more notes of a chord retained in the following chord.

Harp. One of the most ancient stringed instruments, the tones of which are produced by plucking the strings (mainly of catgut) with the fingers of the right and left hands. The harp has a diatonic scale. On account of the absence of the chromatic tones the performer was, of course, unable to modulate. To remedy this defect various contrivances have been resorted to. The most perfect instrument hitherto constructed is Erard's "double-action pedal harp," a development of the single-action pedal harp. It has seven pedals by which the strings may be raised either a semitone or a whole tone, and thus all the keys become practicable. This double-action harp has a compass of more than six and a half octaves—from $C_\flat$ to $f'''_\flat$, and, as each string can be raised two semitones, even to $f'''_\sharp$. The seven pedals act respectively throughout all the octaves, each on one of the seven degrees of the $C_\flat$ major scale, this being the key in which the harp is tuned. The single-action harp was in the key of $E_\flat$, and its compass extended from F, to d'''. The harp of the ancient Egyptians was without a "pillar" for supporting the pull of the strings. It was simply a bow, patterned after the hunting-bow, and in the earliest times had only five strings.

Harp, Æolian. An instrument consisting of wire or catgut drawn in parallel lines over a box of thin wood and placed so that a current of air may cause the strings to vibrate.

Harp, couched. Name originally given to the spinet.

Harp, double-action. A harp with pedals that can be used in two positions, the first raising the instrument a half-step, and the second a whole step.

Harpe (härp), Fr. A harp.

Harpechorde (härp-körd), Fr. An old French name for the harpsichord.

Harpe Eolienne (härp ä-ō-lĭ-ĕnn), Fr. Æolian harp.

Harpeggiate (här-pĕd-jĭ-ä'tē), It. In the style of a harp, arpeggiately.

Harpeggiato (här-pĕd-jĭ-ä'tō), It. Causing the sounds of a chord to be played not together but distinctly one after another. See Arpeggiato.

Harpeggiren (här-pĕ-ghē'r'n), Ger. Arpeggiate.

Harper. } A performer upon the harp.
Harpist. }

Harpicordo (här'pĭ-kōr-dō), It. A harpsichord.

Harp, Jew's. A small instrument made of brass, or steel, with a flexible metal tongue, played upon by placing it between the teeth and vibrating the tongue by striking it with the finger; the action of the breath determines the power of the tone. Known in the music trade as the "Irish harp."

Harp lute. An instrument having twelve strings, and resembling the guitar.

Harp pedal. The pedal of a pianoforte, sometimes called the soft pedal.

Harpsecol. See Harpsichord.

Harpsichord. A keyboard instrument, one of the predecessors of the pianoforte. The strings, instead of being struck by tangents, as in the clavichord, or by hammers, as in the pianoforte, were plucked by quills or pieces of hard leather. (V. Jack.) The spinet and virginal are varieties of the harpsichord, differing from it in size and form. The form of the harpsichord is indicated by the German name of the instrument—Flügel, wing, the same as the modern grand piano. The harpsichord had often more than one keyboard, and also was provided with stops by which the tone could be modified.

Harpsichord, double. A harpsichord with two unison strings and an octave.

Harpsichord, harmonica. A harmonica, the sounds of which are produced by means of keys similar to the pianoforte, invented at Berlin.

Harpsicon. An old name for the harpsichord.

Harp, single-action. A harp whose pedals can be used in one position only, raising the sounds of the instrument a half step.

Harp style. In the arpeggio style.

Harp, triangular. An ancient instrument of Phrygian invention.

Harsur (här-soor), or, Hasur (hä-zoor), Heb. An instrument of ten strings, used by the Hebrews.

Hexameron (hĕx-ăm'ĕ-rŏn), Gr. Set of six musical pieces, or songs.

Hexameter. In ancient poetry a verse of six feet, the first four of which may be either dactyls or spondees, the fifth always a dactyl, and the sixth a spondee.

Hexaphonic. Composed of six voices.

Hiatus (hī-ā'toos), Lat. A gap, imperfect harmony.

Hibernian melodies. Irish melodies.

Hidden canon. A close canon.

Hidden fifths and Hidden octaves. In the article "Consecutives" it has been stated that progressions of perfect fifths and octaves are prohibited. Hidden fifths and octaves—which occur when the second of two intervals formed by two parts progressing in similar motion is a perfect fifth or octave—are likewise prohibited, but not so strictly. Many of these progressions are indeed quite harmless. They are, barring some exceptions, least objectionable when the upper of the two parts proceeds a degree upward or downward, and the lower takes a leap of a third, fourth, or fifth. The more or less of their innocuousness depends upon the closeness of the harmonic connection and the progression of the other parts. Much, moreover, is permissible in the middle parts which would incur censure in the extreme parts. These progressions are prohibited and called hidden because the ear fills up, as it were, the gap or gaps between the actual sounds, and hears fifths or octaves which otherwise are not obvious. For instance, if the actual sounds are as at (a), the ear hears as at (b).

Hiefhorn (hēf'hôrn), Ger. Bugle-horn, hunting-horn.

Hief (hēf), Hiefstoss (hēf'stŏss), Ger. Sound given by the bugle or hunting-horn.

Horæ regulares (hō'rā rĕg-oo-lä'rēs), Lat. }
Hours; chants sung at prescribed hours in convents and monasteries.

Horizontal lines. }
Horizontal strokes. } Used in connection with the figured bass, they usually show the continuation of the same harmony, the bass note being unchanged, but they are sometimes used to abbreviate the expression of figures, in which case, if the bass part moves, the harmony must necessarily be changed.

Horn. A wind instrument chiefly used in hunting.

Horn, alpine. A narrow wooden tube, or trumpet, about eight feet long, widening to a bell at the larger end. Played by means of a cup-shaped mouthpiece. The tone is very penetrating, but it is very difficult to blow. It gives the natural harmonics of its own fundamental.

Horn, basset. An instrument resembling the clarinet, but of greater compass, embracing nearly four octaves.

Horn, bassetto. A species of clarinet a fifth lower than the C clarinet.

Hörner (hör'nĕr), Ger. pl. The horns.

Hörnerschall (hör'ner-shäll), Ger. Sound of horns.

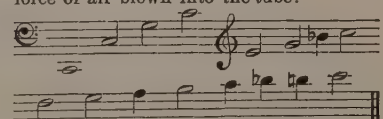
Horn, French. A brass wind instrument consisting of a long, twisted tube terminating in a wide, outspreading bell. There are two kinds of horns: the natural horn, and the valve horn. The following natural harmonic series can be obtained by the modification of the position of the lips and the force of air blown into the tube:



The first of these notes is, however, not practicable, and the notes marked as crotchets are not in tune. By inserting the hand more or less far into the bell the natural (or open) notes may be more or less flattened, and thus all the other notes obtained, at least from F♯, below the first G, upward. But these stopped (or closed) notes are not so clear as the natural ones, especially those more than a semitone below the latter. The length of the tube, and, consequently, the key of the instrument, can be altered by crooks (q. v.). The notation for the horn is always in the key of C. Only the horn in C alto, however, sounds the notes as they are written, whereas the one in B♭ basso sounds them a major ninth lower, the one in C an octave lower, the one in D a minor seventh lower, the one in E♭ a major sixth lower, the one in E a minor sixth lower, the one in F a perfect fifth lower, the one in G a perfect fourth lower, the one in A a minor third lower, the one in B♭ alto a major second lower, etc. On the valve horn can be produced all the semitones, from the F♯ below the second C upward, as open notes. The horn with three valves comprises in fact seven natural horns. (V. Valves.) Music for the horn is noted in the G clef, with the exception, however, of the lowest notes, which are written in the F clef, and an octave lower than the rest.

Hornpipe. An old dance, in triple time, peculiar to the English nation. It is supposed to have received its name from the instrument played on during its performance. Modern hornpipes are usually in common time, and of a more lively character than the ancient hornpipe.

Imbroglio (ēm-brōl'yō), It. Confusion, want of distinct ideas.

Imitando (Im-ĭ-tän'dō), It. Imitating.

Imitando la voce (ĭm-ĭ-tän'dō lä vō'tshĕ), It. Imitating the inflections of the voice.

Imitatio (Im-ĭ-tä'tsĭ-ō), Lat. Imitation, in counterpoint.

Imitation. The more or less exact repetition of a musical figure in another voice. (See also Canon.) Imitation is strict when the melodic intervals and resulting harmonies are exactly imitated; free when not even the melody and rhythm are exactly repeated. (See also subordinate titles below.) A sequence is an imitation, but in the same voice.

Imitation, augmented. A style of imitation in which the answer is given in notes of greater value than those of the subject.

Imitation, diminished. A style of imitation in which the answer is given in notes of less value than those of the subject.

Imitation, freely inverted. Where the order of successive notes is not strictly retained.

Imitation, in contrary motion. That in which the answers invert the subject so that the rising intervals descend, and the falling intervals ascend.

Imitation, in different divisions. That in which the subject is answered in a different division of the bar; for instance, the subject beginning on the accented division is answered on the unaccented.

Imitation, in similar motion. Where the answer retains the same order of notes as the subject.

Imitation, retrograde. A form of imitation in which the subject is commenced backwards in the answer.

Imitation, reversed retrograde. A form of imitation in which the subject is commenced backwards in the answer, and in contrary motion.

Imitation, simple. A simple imitation.

Lyra-viol. An old instrument of the lyre or harp species; it had six strings and seven frets.

Lyre. One of the most ancient of stringed instruments, said to have been invented by Mercury about the year 2000 A. M., and formed of a tortoise shell; a species of harp. The Greek kithara was an improved lyre. The lyre had originally three or four strings; later, seven. The most advanced form of lyre, perhaps, was the magadis, which is reputed to have had twenty strings.

Lyric. Lyrical. These words—which, in the first place, signify "pertaining to the lyre," then, also, "fitted to be sung to the lyre," and, lastly, "appropriate to song"—are especially applied to poetry and music which express individual emotions. The lyrical in poetry and music has been described as the perfect and most euphonious expression, as the ideal representation, or objectivation, of subjective feelings. The words lyric and lyrical are used in distinction from epic (narrative) and dramatic. A lyric drama is a synonym for opera; the lyric stage, for operatic stage. An opera is called lyric when the lyric element predominates over the heroic—sentiment over action.

Lyric comedy. A comedy in which vocal music forms a principal part; comic opera.

Madriale (mä-drĭ-ä'lĕ), It. A madrigal; the name formerly given by the Italians to the intermezzi, or pieces performed between the acts of a play or an opera.

Madrialetto (mä-drĭ-ä-lĕt'tō), a short madrigal.

Madrigal (măd'rĭ-găl). This word of uncertain derivation (mandra, flock?) has two significations: (1) A short lyrical poem of no fixed form. A pastoral or amorous song. (2) A vocal composition mostly in four or five parts, often also in six or three parts, more rarely in seven, and still less rarely in two parts. It had its origin in Italy, where it came into vogue in the sixteenth century, flourishing in this and the following century. Next to Italy the madrigal was most successfully cultivated in England. Thomas Morley, one of the most famous madrigalists, tells us (in 1597) that it was, next to the motet, the most "artificial" kind of music, but at the same time one of the most delightful to men of understanding. And he demanded from its composers not only "points" and all sorts of contrapuntal devices, but also "an amorous humor" and an inexhaustible variety of sentiment.

March. A musical composition intended to accompany marching, more especially of soldiers. There are two kinds of marches—the quick march, or quickstep, and the slow, or processional, march. Slow marches may be divided into festal and funeral marches. These two last-named species are much more solemn and dignified in their movement than the quick marches, but all of them are mostly in 4-4 time. Quick marches consist oftenest of two halves, each of two parts, and each part of eight, twelve, or sixteen bars. The second half is called the trio. For the most part, processional marches have, likewise, this symmetrical rhythmical arrangement of the dance form, but they are not strictly bound to it as quick marches are. Although 4-4 time is the usual march-measure, marches in 2-4, 6-8, and even 3-4, are to be met with.

Measure. That division of time by which the air and movement of music are regulated; the space between two bar lines on the staff. A rhythmic division, consisting of a certain number of pulses. From this feature measures are classified as two-pulse, three-pulse, four-pulse, six-pulse, nine-pulse, and twelve-pulse. The last three classes are called compound, consisting of two units in which each unit consists of a triplet, or group of three. Hence compound duple measure (six pulses), compound triple (nine), and compound quadruple (twelve). All measures consist of either twos or threes. The main accent always falls upon the first unit, and the bar is intended to show the place of the strong pulse. Considered with reference to the manner in which they are written, measures are described as 2-2, 2-4, 2-8, etc., in which the unit is represented by a half-note, a quarter, or eighth, 3-2, 3-4, 3-8, etc., and so on, of all other forms. The selection of a note-form to represent the unit is purely a matter of taste with the composer, and in no way affects the musical effect. The name measure is often applied to the representation of it, commonly described as "the space between two bars." This is incorrect. A measure is a certain rhythmical division, extending from a strong pulse to the next, or from any pulse to the corresponding place in the next group. The term "bar" is often improperly applied to measure. The bar is simply the line indicating the place of the strong pulse.

Minue (mē'noo-ā), Sp. A minuet.

Minuet. A dance of French origin in ternary time—usually in 3-4, sometimes in 3-8 time. Its movement and character changed in the course of its career. A courtly stateliness and well-regulated gaiety are its most prominent features. By its introduction, first, into the suite and partita, and afterwards into the sonata, symphony, etc., it has become an artistic form of importance. In the sonata and symphony it generally consists of two minuets, each of two parts, the first minuet being repeated after the second, which is called the trio. The composers in thus treating the minuet artistically have by no means always retained the original nature of the dance; on the contrary, have produced under this name pieces very different in movement and character.

Minuettina (mē-noo-ĕt-tē'nä), It. A little minuet.

Minuetto (mē-noo-ĕt'tō), It. A minuet.

Mixolydian. (1) In the ancient Greek system the name of one of the octave species b c d e f g a b, also called Hyperdorian, and of one of the transposition scales. (2) In the old ecclesiastical system it is the name of the seventh (the fourth authentic) mode, or tone (g a b c d e f g).

Mixture. An organ-stop consisting of several ranks of pipes—from two to five pipes sounding different harmonic notes corresponding to each key. Modern mixtures contain only octaves and fifths, the latter voiced softly and in flute quality. They impart brightness to the full organ tone, but are not so indispensable as before organ-voicing had become so advanced. Formerly it was very difficult to secure the harmonic overtones from the fundamental pipes. The tone was therefore dull and heavy. Mixtures were invented to remedy this. The old mixtures, called also furniture, cymbal, etc., contained thirds, which, when played in chords, produced a hideous snarling.

Mode. Species of scale. In the modern system of music there are only two modes, the major and minor; in the ancient Greek and the mediæval ecclesiastical system there was a much greater number.

Mode, major. That in which the third from the keynote is major.

Mode, minor. That which in the third degree from the tonic forms the interval of a minor third.

Moderamento (mō-dĕ-rä-mĕn'tō), It. Moderato (mō-dĕ-rä'tō), It. Moderately; in moderate time.

Modulante (mō-doo-län'tĕ), It. Modulating.

Modulate. To move from one key to another in a manner agreeable to the ear.

Modulate, Modulation. The primary meaning of "to modulate" is "to form after a certain mode, to measure off properly." In music it originally meant "to measure rhythmically," then, also, "to measure melodically"—melodic measurement being synonymous with "inflection." In modern technical terminology "to modulate" signifies "to change the key;" "modulation," "a change of key." Modern usage differs much from that current with Bach and his contemporaries. According to modern ideas, any chord may follow any other whenever it can be introduced smoothly or with suitable musical effect. Such a chord may be apparently foreign to the key of the first chord, but it is not now regarded as constituting a modulation unless the ear is unsettled from the original tonic, which is by no means universally the case. Hence the idea of key has been materially enlarged, so as to include all possible chords which can be led into smoothly from any chord in the key. A modulation is said to be abrupt when the new key comes suddenly, as when from the key of C we suddenly go to the key of A♭ and remain there. As opposed to the usual modulation by a succession of fifths, as practiced in the time of Bach. Bach, however, uses almost all chords which have been used since.

Modulation, abrupt. Sudden modulation into keys which are not closely related to the original key.

Modulation, deceptive. Any modulation by which the ear is deceived and led to an unexpected harmony.

Modulation, enharmonic. A modulation effected by altering the notation of one or more intervals belonging to some characteristic chord, and thus changing the key and the harmony from that into which it would naturally have resolved. The chords which admit of these alterations are, first, the diminished seventh and its inversions; secondly, the dominant seventh not inverted, and the chord of the superfluous sixth and perfect fifth.

Modulation, passing. } A form of modula-

Motif (mō-tēf'), Fr. Motive, theme, subject.

Motion. (1) The melodic progression of a part considered by itself. It may be either conjunct or disjunct—that is, the progression may be by degrees or by skips. (2) The melodic progression of two or more parts considered in their relation to each other. There are three kinds of motion: (a) Similar motion, when two parts ascend and descend together. (b) Contrary motion, when the one ascends and the other descends. (c) Oblique motion, when one part remains stationary while the other ascends or descends. The simultaneous combination of these three kinds of progression is called "mixed motion." (3) Also used of rhythmic motion, as pulse motion, meaning that the prevailing tone length is that of the measure pulse, half-pulse motion, where the prevailing motion is of half-pulse, etc. Also "eighth-note motion," meaning that the prevailing entrances of tones in a single voice, or of tones in different voices, fall at the uniform period of an eighth-note.

Obliquo (ōb-lē'kwō), It. Oblique.

Oboe (ō'bō-ē), Ger. } A hautboy; also the Oboe (ō-bō-ā'), It. } name of an organ-stop. (1) A wood wind instrument with a mouthpiece consisting of a double reed. Its extreme compass extends from b♭ or b♯ to f‴. Music for the oboe is written in the G clef, and written as it sounds. This is the oboe of our orchestras. In military bands are also sometimes to be met with oboes in B♭ and a soprano oboe in E♭, which are, of course, transposing instruments. (2) There are, likewise, organ-stops of the name of oboe, of 8-feet and more rarely of 4-feet pitch. (3) For other kinds of oboe, oboes now obsolete, see the following articles:

Oboe basso (ō-bō-ā' bäs'sō), It. This obsolete instrument stood a minor third lower than the ordinary oboe.

Oboe da caccia (ō-bō-ā' dä kät'tshĭ-ä), It. A larger species of oboe, with the music written in the alto clef. Its natural key was F or E♭.

Oboe d'amore (ō-bō-ā' d'ä-mō'rĕ), It. } A spe-
Oboe lungo (ō-bō-ā' loon'gō), } cies of oboe, longer than the ordinary oboe, with a thinner bore and lower pitch.

Octaphonic. Composed of eight voices.

Octava alta (ōk-tä'vä äl'tä), It. Play the passage an octave higher.

Octava grave (ōk-tä'vä grä'vä), Sp. Octave below.

Octave. The interval from any tone to the eighth above or below in the same scale. The octave above any tone is produced by exactly twice as rapid a vibration frequency, and the octave below by exactly half as many vibrations. The most fundamental principle in harmony is that octaves are equivalent and may be interchanged in any chord without changing its harmonic character.

Octave clarion. A two-feet reed-stop in an organ.

Octave flute. A small flute an octave higher than the German or ordinary flute; a piccolo.

Octave hautboy. A 4-feet organ reed-stop; the pipes are of the hautboy species.

Octave, large. The third octave, indicated in the German tablature by capital letters.

Octave, large, once-marked. The second octave, indicated by capital letters having a single line below.

Octave, large, twice-marked. The first octave, indicated by capital letters having two lines below them.

Octaves, consecutive. Two parts moving in unison or octaves with each other.

Octaves, covered. Certain apparent consecutive octaves which occur in harmony, in passing by similar motion to a perfect concord.

Octave, small. The fourth octave, so called because indicated by small letters in the German tablature.

Octave, small, five-times marked. The ninth octave, represented by small letters with five lines above them.

Octave, small, four-times marked. The eighth octave, represented by small letters with four lines above them.

Octave, small, once-marked. The fifth octave, indicated by small letters with one line above them.

Octave, small, six-times marked. The tenth octave, indicated by small letters with six lines above them.

Octave, small, thrice-marked. The seventh octave, indicated by small letters with three lines above them.

Octave, small, twice-marked. The sixth octave, indicated by small letters with two lines above them.

Octaves, short. Those lower octaves of an organ the extreme keys of which, on account of the omission of some of the intermediate notes, lie nearer to each other than those of the full octave.

Octave staff. A system of notation introduced by a Mr. Adams, of New Jersey, which consists of three groups of lines combined, comprising three octaves of ordinary vocal music, dispensing with flats and sharps, and giving to each tone its own position.

Octave stop. An organ-stop of four-feet pitch, hence an octave above the diapason; the position of fingers for stopping the interval of an octave upon the fingerboard; a mechanical stop in reed-organs, coupling the keys an octave above, or borrowing within the instrument in such a manner that octaves result.

Op. Abbreviation of Opus, work.

Open diapason. An organ-stop, generally made of metal, and thus called because the pipes are open at the top. It commands the whole scale, and is the most important stop of the instrument.

Open harmony. Chord-positions in which the upper three voices generally or uniformly exceed the compass of an octave.

Open note. A half-note, a whole note.

Open pipes. Organ-pipes with open ends, instead of being closed with a stopper or chimney. All the free voices in an organ are produced by open pipes. All the voices produced by stopped pipes are somewhat veiled in character, or flute-like.

Open tone. A tone produced by an open string, or by a wind instrument without using the valve or keys. A tone open and free in quality.

Oper (ō'pĕr), Ger. } A drama set to music.
Opera (ŏ-pĕ-rä), It. } According to the best modern practice the opera consists of almost every variety of music, not alone songs, duets, trios, and other concerted pieces, choruses, elaborate finales, and richly instrumented orchestral accompaniment, but also melodramatic music, which accompanies the action, even in those moments when there is no singing in progress.

Preludes and interludes are elaborate orchestral pieces, often reaching symphonic proportions.

Opera music has for its problem to interpret the drama and to intensify its impression, and in order to accomplish this it is at liberty to employ the complete resources of the art, almost to an unrestricted degree. When there is a dramatic action progressing before the eyes of the spectator, many strange musical combinations become intelligible which without such explanation would seem far-fetched or impossible. Hence opera has had great influence upon the progress of music as an art.

Opera is divided into schools according to the emphasis placed upon the different elements composing it. French opera, for instance, places the text in the foremost place, and the dramatic movement next; hence it does not permit itself the arias and long musical pieces of the Italians, or of the Germans. German opera places the drama first, and the music second, not only as an accompaniment, but still more as a musical interpreter of the inner spirit of the progressing actions, and of the drama as a whole. Italian opera places the voice and the art of singing first, and the drama second. Hence this school has produced the great bulk of arias which are available for concert performances, apart from the dramatic action. Most of the German arias existing are available for separate performance, having been composed after Italian principles.

Opera was first invented about the year 1600, as a sort of revival of the classic Greek drama. Its greatest works have been composed within the present century, or immediately before it (1790 to 1895).

Opera buffa (ŏ'pĕ-rä boof'fä), It. An opera upon a comic or farcical subject, in which music is treated lightly and for the purpose of pleasing. The farce is the main thing. Occasionally high-class opera is distinctly burlesqued, giving rise to buffa arias; the absurdity may be musical or may turn upon the text.

Opera buffe (ŏ'pĕ-rä boof-fĕ), It. Comic opera.

Opera, comic. An opera interspersed with light songs, amusing incidents, dances, etc.

Opera di camera (ŏ'pĕ-rä dē kä'mĕ-rä), It. A short opera to be performed in a room.

Orage (ō-räzh'), Fr. A storm; a composition imitating a storm.

Oratoire (ŏr-ä-twär'), Fr. Oratorio.

Oratorio. A musical work upon a Biblical subject, consisting of solos, choruses, orchestral accompaniment, and containing an implied action or story. Oratorio is part of the great "stilo rappresentativo" in music, the art of representing something by means of music, or accompanied by music. Originally the same as an opera with religious intention, and adapted for use as part of a festival church service, it has digressed into something much more elaborate. The great oratorios aim at the noble, the heroic, and the sublime in dramatic and historical conception no less than in musical execution. Hence it is in this department that music has found itself unfettered by the necessity of pleasing or of adapting itself to moderate conditions. The ideal has been sought, regardless of lesser considerations, hence such works as those of Handel, Bach, and many by later writers.

Oratorio (ō-rä-tō'rĭ-ō), It.
Oratorium (ō'rä-tō'rĭ-oom), Lat. } Oratorio.
Oratorium (ō'rä-tō'rĭ-oom), Ger.

Orchestra (or'kĕs-trä). A full company of instruments and players. A modern symphony orchestra consists of about 80 to 100 players, in the following proportions: Violins, 40; violas, 'cellos, and basses, 30; oboes, flutes, clarinets, and bassoons, 11; horns, trumpets, and trombones, 9; tympani and percussion, 4; total, 94. If further enlargement is desired, the strings are strengthened. In modern practice the orchestra is handled in groups, forming a string orchestra, the wood wind and the brass. These groups often contrast with each other throughout a work, playing all together in the most intense portions only. (2) Also the place in which the players sit to play, or the part of the auditorium nearest the place of the players.

Orchester (ôr'kĕs-tĕr), Ger.
Orchestra (ôr-kās'trä), It.
Orchestre (ôr-kĕstr), Fr. } The orchestra.

Orchesterverein (ôr-kĕs'tĕr-vĕr-rīn'), Ger. An orchestral society; instrumental association.

Orchestration. The art of writing or arranging music for an orchestra. The greatest writers upon this subject are Berlioz and F. A. Gevaert. The greatest masters of the art itself have been Berlioz, Beethoven, Mozart, Weber, and Wagner. There are now many modern masters who excel in the art of orchestral coloring.

Orchestrer (ôr-kĕs-trā'), Fr. To score.

Orchestrina (ôr-kĕs-trē'nä).
Orchestrion (ôr-kĕs'trĭ-ŏn). } An instrument composed of pipes and other sounding apparatuses, played automatically (by means of a barrel) for the imitation of orchestral effects. Many of these instruments are of great size, and produce extraordinarily fine effects.

Ordinario (ôr-dĭ-nä'rĭ-ō), It. Ordinary, usual, common; a tempo ordinario, in the usual time.

Orecchia (ō-rā'kĭ-ä), It.
Orecchio (ō-rā'kĭ-ō), It. } The ear.

Orecchia musicale (ō-rā'kĭ-ä moo-zĭ-kä'lĕ), It. A musical ear.

Orecchiante (ō-rā'kĭ-än-tĕ), It. Singing by ear.

Organ. A keyboard instrument in which sound is produced by means of pipes which are blown on the principle of whistles, by means of compressed air which comes from the windchests and bellows, along windtrunks, and is admitted to the pipes by the opening of a pallet, or valve, actuated by the player's finger upon a key.

An organ may have from one to five keyboards, and from one to twenty stops (or sets of pipes) to each keyboard. The keyboards played by the hands are called manuals; those which the feet play are called pedales. The latter are used for the very low bass tones only.

A stop is a set of pipes voiced all alike, one pipe to each key of the keyboard to which the stop appertains.

The usual number of pipes in a stop is sixty-one, but mixtures have from three to five times as many, and a corresponding multiplication of sounds.

The stops are classified as diapason, flute, string, and reed. The former furnish the foundation, the others are for specialties of tone.

Pipes are of wood or metal, the latter a special alloy of lead and tin, the tin in good examples reaching fifty percent, or more.

In former times each key pulled down a long pallet, or valve, and when several keyboards were coupled, the touch was extremely heavy. In modern organs the action is pneumatic or electric. In the latter case the parts of the organ can be distributed in any convenient place without impairing the organist's control over them; but when a pipe stands too far away so much time is lost in the sound coming that blurring is often produced.

When there are four manuals, the most important is called the great, the next the swell, the choir, and the solo. At present nearly or quite all the manual stops are made louder or softer by means of swells, and there is no settled order of placing the manuals, except that the choir organ is generally lowest, the great next, the swell next, and the solo uppermost.

The wind pressure often varies in different parts of the same organ from what is called "three-inch" to "five-inch" or "six-inch"—the dimensions having reference to a column of water which the pressure will balance. About three-and-a-half-inch wind is normal for small halls; solo stops take the higher pressures.

Owing to the modern improvements in the organ it is now capable of much expression, and in point of sustained power and massiveness of tone it is as often called the "king of instruments." Great improvements have been made in the art of voicing, whereby modern organs reproduce orchestral effects with considerable oraisemblance.

Organ, barrel. A hand organ.

Organ, bellows. A machine for supplying the pipes of an organ with wind.

Organ-blower. One who works the bellows of an organ.

Organ, buffet. A very small organ.

Organe (ôr-gän), Fr. An organ.

Organ, enharmonic.
Organ, euharmonic. } An instrument of American origin, containing three or four times the usual number of distinct sounds within the compass of an octave, furnishing the precise intervals for every key, the tones comprising the scale of each key being produced by pressing a pedal corresponding to its keynote.

Organetto (ôr-gä-nĕt'tō), It. A small organ.

Organ, hand. A common wind instrument carried about the street, consisting of a cylinder, turned by hand, the revolution of which, causing the machinery to act upon the keys, produces a number of well-known airs and tunes.

Organ, harmonium. A reed instrument, the reeds of which are voiced to imitate organ-stops.

Organique (ôr-gän-ēk), Fr. Relating to the organ.

Orgelmusik (ôr'gh'l-moo-zĭk'), Ger. Organ music.

Organist. A player on the organ.

Organista (ôr-gä-nēs'tä), It.
Organista (ôr-gä-nēs'tä), Sp. } An organist.

Organistrum (ôr-gä-nĭs'troom), Lat. An ancient instrument of the hurdygurdy variety, in which strings were actuated by wheel, and the tones controlled by keys acting upon the keyboard. In use about 1100 A. D.

Organi vocali (ôr-gä'nē vō-kä'lē), It. pl. The vocal organs.

Organ-loft. That part of the gallery of a church where the organ is placed.

Parallel intervals. Intervals passing in two parallel parts in the same direction; consecutive intervals.

Parallel keys. The major and its relative minor.

Parallel motion. The motion of two voices in the same direction in equal intervals, whereby the same distance is maintained continually. All forms of parallel motion are weak contrapuntally, except parallel octaves when used for strengthening a melody. In this sense they are in constant use in all large compositions. Parallel thirds and sixths are weak because when this motion is maintained for more than three steps in succession, the second voice becomes the mere satellite of the first. Parallel fifths are invariably wrong when audible. They imply a faulty progression of fundamental harmonies.

Paralleltonarten (pä-rä-lĕl-tōn-är-t'n), Ger. Parallel keys. Related keys. Keys having many tones in common.

Paraphrase. An explanation of some text or passage in a more clear and ample manner than is expressed in the words of the author. A free transcription of an air or passage for some instrument other than that for which it was originally composed.

Paspie (päs'pĭ-ā), Sp. A kind of dance.

Paspy. See Passepied.

Pas redoublé (pä rĕ-doo-blā), Fr. A quick step; an increased, redoubled step.

Passacaglio (päs-sä-käl'yĭ-ō), It. } A species
Passacaille (päs-sä-käl), Fr. } of chacone, a slow dance with divisions on a ground bass in 3-4 time and always in a minor key.

Passage. Any phrase or short portion of an air, or other composition. Every member of a strain or movement is a passage.

Passaggio (päs-säd'jĭ-ō), It. A passage or series of notes.

Passamezzo (päs-sä-mĕt'sō), It. An old slow dance, little differing from the action of walking.

Passepied (päss-pĭ'ā), Fr. A sort of jig; lively old French dance in 3-4, 3-8, or 6-8 time; a kind of quick minuet, with three or more strains or reprises, the first consisting of eight bars.

Pas seul (pä sül), Fr. A dance by one performer.

Passing modulation. A transient modulation.

Passing tones. Dissonances introduced upon the weak part of the beat, leading across from one consonant tone to another, by conjunct movement, or stepwise, and not by skips.

Passionata (päs-sĭ-ō-nä'tä),
Passionatamente (päs-sĭ-ō-nä-tä-mĕn'tĕ),
Passionate (päs-sĭ-ō-nä'tĕ),
Passionato (pä-sĭ-ō-nä'tō), It.
Passionate, impassioned, with fervor and pathos.

Passione, (päs-sĭ-ō'nĕ), It. Passion, feeling.

Passion music. Music composed for describing the Passion of our Lord. Used in Holy Week.

Passionsmusik, (päs-sĭ-ōns-moo-zēk'), Ger. Passion music.

Pasticio (päs-tē't'shĭ-ō), It. } A medley, an Pastiche (päs'tēsh) Fr. } opera made up of songs, etc., by various composers; the poetry being written to the music, instead of the music to the poetry.

Pastoral. A musical drama, the personages and scenery of which are chiefly rural. A pastoral is also any lyrical production, the subject of which is taken from rural life; and the Italians give the same name to an instrumental composition written in the pastoral style.

Pastorale (päs-tō-rä'lĕ), It. } Pastoral, rural,
Pastorelle (päs-tō'rĕl), Fr. } belonging to a shepherd; a soft movement in a pastoral and rural style.

Pastoral flute. Shepherd's flute.

Pastourelle (päs-too-rĕll'), Fr. One of the movements of a quadrille.

Patetica (pä-tā'tĭ-kä), It. Pathetic.

Pateticamente (pä-tā'tĭ-kä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Pathetically.

Patetico (pä-tā'tĭ-kō), It. }
Pathétique (pä-tā-tēk), Fr. } Pathetic.
Pathetisch (pä-tā'tĭsh), Ger. }

Pathetic. Applied to music when it excites emotions of sorrow, pity, sympathy, etc.

Patimento (pä-tĭ-mĕn'tō), It. Affliction, grief, suffering.

Patriotic. Songs having for their theme love of country.

Pauker (pou'kĕr), Ger. Kettledrummer.

Pausa (pä-oo'zä), It. }
Pausa (pou'zä), Lat. } A pause.

Pause (pou'zĕ), Ger. A rest.

Pause. A character (𝄐) which lengthens the duration of a note, or rest, over which it is placed, beyond its natural value, or at the pleasure of the performer. When placed over a double bar it shows the termination of the movement or piece.

Pause demi (pōz dĕ-mē'), Fr. A minim rest.

Pavan, Eng. }
Pavana (pä-vä'nä), It. } A grave, stately dance, which took Pavane (pä-vänh'), Fr. } its name from pavo, a peacock. It was danced by princes in their mantles, and ladies in gowns with long trains whose motions resembled those of a peacock's tail. It was in 3-4 time and generally in three strains, each of which was repeated.

Paventato (pä-vĕn-tä'tō), It. }
Paventoso (pä-vĕn-tō'zō), It. } Fearful, timorous, with anxiety and embarrassment.

Pavillion (pä-vē-yŏnh), Fr. The bole of a horn or other wind instrument.

Pavillion chinois (pä-vē-yŏnh she-nwa', An instrument consisting of an upright pole with numerous little bells, which impart brilliancy to lively pieces and pompous military marches.

Peal. A set of bells tuned to each other: the changes rung upon a set of bells.

Pean. A pæan; a song of praise.

Ped. An abbreviation of Pedal.

Pedal. A lever operated by the foot. Organ-pedals are keys corresponding to those of the key-manual, which command the low basses. The general compass of an organ-pedalier is two octaves and a half, from CCC to F. The pedals are played by both feet, using heel and toe as convenient. The use of the toe is indicated by the mark ∨, over the note for the right foot, or under it for the left. The heel is indicated in the same manner by the sign O.

The organ has also other pedals called "composition pedals," which command certain combinations of stops. There are, moreover, what are called "swell-pedals," which operate the swell-blinds, and shut in or liberate the sound. Swell-pedals are simply plain levers, which may be fixed by a racket at any position desired, or, more commonly, "balanced," operated by the heel and toe, and remaining at any point desired.

The pianoforte has two or three pedals. That upon the right is called the damper-pedal, and its office is to raise the dampers from the keys, either for permitting tones to continue after the fingers have left the keys or for promoting sympathetic resonance. The use of the damper-pedal is indicated by the character Ped., and its cessation by the mark ✻ or ⊕. The damper-pedal is used very many times where no marks appear. It is permissible everywhere, subject to the following restrictions: 1, that no blurring of melody or harmony (intermingling of dissimilar harmonic elements) is made by its use; 2, that the indicated phrasing is not covered up by it.

The pedal at the extreme left is called the "soft pedal." On grand pianos it shifts the action so that the hammers strike upon only two of the three strings of the unison. In the upright it brings the hammers nearer the strings. Its use is indicated by the words Una corda, or Verschiebung, and its discontinuance by the words "tre corde." The soft pedal is permissible whenever it is desired to diminish the volume of sound.

When there is a third pedal (between the two others) it is generally a tone-sustaining pedal, whose office it is to sustain a tone taken while it is in use, whereas the damper-pedal operates all the dampers together. The tone-sustaining pedal is in effect a damper-pedal which operates upon only the single tone or chord which may be held at the moment when the pedal is pressed. These will be sustained as long as the pedal is held, while all that may be taken during its use will be unaffected. This device is more and more important as the vibration of the pianoforte becomes longer.

The harp is furnished with eight pedals, of which the middle one merely opens or closes the little panel in the sounding-case, and corresponds to the name soft and loud pedal. The seven pedals along the sides are named for the notes which they severally affect, A, B, etc. The harp is set in the key of C♭. When a pedal is depressed to its first notch, it revolves a disk which shortens the strings of the same name throughout the instrument, raising the pitch a half-step; when depressed to the second notch it raises the pitch a whole step. Hence, when the A pedal is depressed one notch it makes all the A-flats A-natural; and when to its second notch it makes them A-sharp. In this way the instrument is adjusted to any desired signature, and accidentals are introduced in this way in the course of a piece. The pedals here described are what are called "double-acting," and were invented by Sebastian Erard, about 1823.

The reed organ and the harmonium have two pedals, which are employed in operating the bellows.

Pedalclaves (pĕ-däl'klā'fĕs), Pedalclaviatur (pĕ-däl'klä'vĭ-ä-toor'), Ger. The pedal keyboard in an organ.

Pedale, doppelte (pĕ-dä'lĕ dŏp'pĕl-tĕ), Ger. Pedale doppio (pĕ-dä'lĕ dŏp'pĭ-o), It. Double pedals, in organ-playing; playing the pedals with both feet at once.

Pedale d'organo (pĕ-dä'lĕ d'ôr'gä-nō), It. The pedals of an organ.

Pédales (pĕ'däl), Fr. pl. The pedals.

Pédales de combinaison, Fr. Combination pedals.

Pedalflügel (pĕ-däl'flü'g'l), Ger. A grand piano with a pedal keyboard.

Pedalharfe (pĕ-däl'här'fĕ), Ger.) Pedalharp. A harp with pedals, to produce the semitones.

Pedaliera (pĕ-dä-lĭ-ā'rä), It. The pedal keys of an organ.

Pedal keys. That set of keys belonging to an organ, or similar instrument, which is played by the feet.

Pedal note. A note held by the pedal, or the bass voice, while the harmony formed by the other parts proceeds independently.

Pedal Point. A harmonic phrase, consisting of a single tone prolonged, while the remaining voices proceed with chords many of which are dissonant with the prolonged tone. The opening and closing chords must be those of the prolonged tone. Pedal point derives its name from the pedal of the organ, which originally held the prolonged tone. Pedal points are sometimes made with a soprano tone, but not so often.

Pentachord. An instrument with five strings, a scale or system of five diatonic sounds.

Pentatonic scale. A scale of five notes, sometimes called the Scotch scale, and similar to the modern diatonic major scale, with the fourth and seventh degrees omitted—do, re, mi, sol, la, do; or, in minor, la, do, re, mi, sol, la. In use the seventh degree is sometimes introduced as a passing tone just at the close. This is probably a modern innovation.

Penultimate (pĕ-nŭl'tĭ-māt). The last syllable but one.

Per (pār), It. For, by, through, in.

Percussion. Percussione (pĕr-koos-sĭ-ō'nĕ), It. Striking, as applied to instruments, notes, or chords; or the touch on the pianoforte. A general name for all instruments that are struck, as a gong, drum, bell, tabor, etc.

Perdendo (pĕr-dĕn'dō), Perdendosi (pĕr-dĕn-dō'zī), It. Gradually decreasing the tone and the time; dying away, becoming extinct.

Perfect. A term applied to certain intervals and chords.

Perfect cadence. Dominant harmony followed by that of the tonic; a close upon the keynote preceded by the dominant.

Perfect close. A perfect cadence.

Perfect concords. Perfect consonances. These are the unison, the perfect fourth, perfect fifth, and the octave.

Perfect fifth. An interval equal to three whole tones and one semitone.

Perfect fourth. An interval equal to two whole tones and one semitone

Perfect octave. An interval equal to five whole tones and two semitones.

Perfetto (pĕr-fĕt'to, It. Perfect, complete.

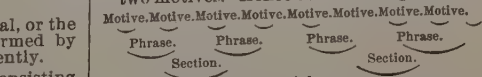
Perigourdine (pĕr-ĭ-goor-dēn). A French dance in 3-8 time.

Period Période (pā-rĭ-ōd), Fr. Periode (pĕ-rĭ-ō'dĕ), It. A complete musical sentence. A period. The simple period consists of eight measures, disposed in two sections of similar extent and rhythmic construction; each section is also composed of two phrases, and each phrase of two motives. Hence the following scheme:



The two sections of the period stand towards each other in the relation of subject and predicate, or, as formerly called, Protasis (awakening expectation), and Apodasis (answering expectation). In simple lyric periods the two phrases of the section often bear a similar relation to each other, the first phrase awakening expectation and the second partially answering it; the third phrase repeats the first, and the fourth completes the answer. Hence the scheme of a lyric period, of which examples are numerous, as, for instance, in the first eight or sixteen measures of almost any Beethoven slow movement.

Certain theorists apply the names Phrase and Section in reversed order to this, calling the smaller member a section, and the half-period a phrase. This usage is not so well sanctioned, and is not so consonant with best German usage.

Periods are shortened by cutting short a measure in the last phrase, or lengthened by repeating the cadence, with or without modification.

A complex period is one in which one or more sections are repeated. See "Primer of Musical Form." (W. S. B. M.)

A dependent period is one which depends upon something else to complete the sense. This may have been already advanced in a previous period, in which case the dependent period will begin upon some chord other than its own tonic—generally its dominant; it will finally end with a complete cadence upon the tonic. More properly, however, the dependence is shown by an imperfect cadence upon the dominant instead of the tonic, in which case another period has the task of fully completing it by presenting its leading idea and fully answering it upon its own tonic. Any period which ends upon some other than its own tonic chord is dependent.

Période musicale (pā-rī-ōd mū-zē-käl), Fr. A musical period.

Periodenbau (pĕ-rī-ō'd'n-bou'), Ger. Composition; the construction of musical periods.

Perlé (pĕr-lā), Fr. Pearled, brilliant; cadence perlee, brilliant cadence.

Perpetual fugue. A canon so constructed that its termination leads to its beginning, and hence may be perpetually repeated.

Perpetuo (pĕr-pā'too-ō), It. Perpetual.

Perpetuum mobile (pĕr-pā'too-oom mō'bĭ-lē), Lat. Perpetual motion. A name applied to certain compositions which go rapidly and without opportunity of pause.

Per recte et retro (pĕr rĕk'tē ĕt rā'trō), Lat. Forward, then backward; the melody or subject reversed, note for note.

Pesante (pĕ-zän'tē), It. Heavy, ponderous; with importance and weight, impressively.

Pesantemente (pĕ-zän-tĕ-mĕn'tē), It. Heavily, forcibly, impressively.

Petit (pĕ-tē'), Fr. Little, small.

Petit chœur (pĕ-tē'kür), Fr. Little choir; a sacred composition in three parts.

Petites flutes (pĕ-tēt' flüt), Fr. The small flutes; the octave or piccolo flutes.

Petto (pĕt'tō), It. The chest, the breast; voce di petto, the chest voice.

Peu (püh), Fr. Little, a little.

Peu à peu (püh ä püh), Fr. Little by little, by degrees.

Pezze (pĕt'sĕ), It. pl. Fragments, scraps; select, detached pieces.

Pezzi concertanti (pĕt'sĭ kōn-tshĕr-tän'tē), It. pl. Concertante pieces, in which each instrument has occasional solos.

Pezzi di bravura (pĕt'sĭ dē brä-voo'rä), It. Compositions for the display of dexterity or rapid execution.

Pezzo (pĕt'sō), It. A fragment; a detached piece of music.

Pf. Abbreviation of Poco forte; a little louder.

Pfeife (pfī'fĕ), Ger. Pipe, fife, flute.

Pfeifen (pfī'f'n), Ger. To play on a fife or flute.

Pfeifendeckel (pfī'f'n-dĕk'ĕl), Ger. The stopper, or covering, of an organ-pipe.

Pfeifer (pfī'fĕr), Ger. A fifer, a piper.

Phantasie (fän-tä-zē), Ger. See Fantasia.

Phantasiebilder (fän-tä-sē'bĭl'd'r), Ger. Fancy pictures.

Phantasiestücke (fän-tä-sē'stü'ke), Ger. Fancy pieces. Name applied by Schumann to his Opus 12.

Phantasiren (fän-tä-zē'r'n), Ger. Improvising.

Phantasirte (fän-tä-zīr'tĕ), Ger. Improvised.

Phantasy. The fancy, the imagination.

Philharmonic (fĭl-här-mŏn'ĭk). Gr. Music-loving.

Phisharmonica (fĭs-här-mŏn'ĭ-kä). A kind of octagonal accordeon.

Phone (fō'nē), Gr. The voice; a sound, or tone.

Phonetic. Vocal, representing sounds.

Phonetics. } The doctrine, or science, of Phonics. } sounds, especially those of the human voice.

Phonometer. An instrument for measuring the vibrations of sounds.

Phorminx (fōr'mĭnx), Ger. A stringed instrument of remote antiquity, resembling the lyre.

Photinx (fō'tĭnx), Gr. Name given by the ancients to their crooked flute.

Phrase. A short musical sentence; a musical thought, or idea.

Phrase, extended. } Any variation of a mel-
Phrase, irregular. } ody by which three measures are used instead of two.

Phrasing. The art of musical delivery in such a way as to bring out the idea. Hence to connect the tones within the phrase, and to define the boundaries of the phrases. Also to form the phrase properly, as to its increasing or diminishing intensity. Hence the art of singing or playing with expression.

Physharmonica (fĭs-här-mŏn'ĭ-kä), Gr. An instrument, the tone of which resembles that of the reed-pipes in an organ, and is produced by the vibration of thin metal tongues, of a similar construction to those of the harmonium; the name is also applied to a stop in the organ with free reeds, and with tubes of half the usual length.

Piacere (pē-ä-tshā'rĕ), It. Pleasure, inclination, fancy; a piacere, at pleasure.

Piacevole (pē-ä-tshā'vō-lĕ), It. Pleasing, graceful, agreeable.

Piacevolezza (pē-ä-tshĕ-vō-lĕt'zä), It. Gracefulness, sweetness.

Piacevolmente (pē-ä-tshĕ-vōl-mĕn'tĕ), It. Gracefully, delicately.

Piacimento (pē-ä-tshĭ-mĕn'tō), It. See Piacere.

Piagendo (pē-ä-gĕn'dō), It. Plaintively, sorrowfully.

Piagnevole (pē-än-yā'vō-lĕ), It. Mournful, doleful, lamentable.

Pianamente (pē-ä-nä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Softly, gently, quietly.

Pianettó (pē-ä-nĕt'tō), It. Very low, very soft.

Piangevole (pē-än-gā'vō-lĕ), It. Lamentable, doleful.

Piangevolmente (pē-än-gā-vōl-mĕn'tĕ), It. Lamentably, dolefully.

Pianino (pē-ä-nē'nō), It. An upright pianoforte.

Pianissimo (pē-ä-nĕs'sĭ-mō), It. Extremely soft.

Pianissimo quanto possibile (pē-ä-nēs'sĭ-mō kwän-tō pōs-sē-bĭ-lĕ), It. As soft as possible.

Pianist An amateur or professional player on the pianoforte.

Pianiste (pē-än-ēst'), Fr. Pianist.

Piano (pē-ä'nō), It. Soft, gentle.

Piano à queue (pē-ä'nō ä küh), Fr. A grand pianoforte.

Piano assai (pē-ä'nō äs-sä'ĭ), It. As soft as possible.

Piano carré (pē-ä'nō kär-rā), Fr. A square pianoforte.

Piano droit (pē-ä'nō drwä), Fr. An upright pianoforte.

Pianoforte. An instrument made in various shapes, such as square (table-shaped), upright (cabinet-shaped), and grand ("wing-shaped;" hence German Fluegel). The pianoforte consists essentially of a sounding-board of thin fir wood, supported by a frame and ribs. Across this board are certain bridges, over which the wire strings are drawn and made fast to hitchpins at the right and tuning-pins at the left, or in the wrestplank. The frame which supports the tension of the strings was formerly of wood, but in 1825 an American, Alpheus Babcock, of Boston, invented an iron plate, which strengthened the wooden frame, and in process of time has itself been strengthened until it carries the entire tension of the strings. The wrestplank, in which the tuning-pins turn, rests upon a shoulder, or arch, of the iron frame.

The pianoforte was the successor of the clavier and harpsichord, and differed essentially from them in the manner in which the strings are made to sound. In the clavier it was by a brass tangent which pushed the wire; in the harpsichord it was by means of a quill plectrum, which plucked the wire, and upon the pianoforte it is by means of a hammer, which, being actuated by the motion of the key, drives against the string and rebounds instantly, so that the string is left as free as the string of a dulcimer struck by a hammer in the hand. The escapement mechanism invented by Christofori was the foundation of all that have been made since. The main parts of the present action were invented by Sebastian Erard, of Paris, early in the first quarter of the present century, but many improvements have been made since. All the early hammers were covered with leather, which soon became hard, causing the tone to become twangy. The discovery of a method of felting hammer-coverings, and of putting them upon the hammers by machinery, was discovered about 1855, and was first practiced by the firm of Nunns & Clarke, of New York. Overstringing was first successfully accomplished by Steinway & Sons, of New York, in 1855. Many important improvements had previously been made by Jonas Chickering between 1830 and 1850.

The tone of the pianoforte apparently depends upon three elements conjointly: The sounding-board and its treatment, the scale (the relative length of strings, their weight, and the point where the hammer strikes them), and the hammers. The durability depends upon general solidity of construction, the use of approved material, and scientific adjustment of the instrument in all its parts to sustain the great tension, which in large concert grands now amounts to above eighteen tons. The greatest difficulty is the sounding-board. In the nature of the case this has to be of thin wood, yet the strings must pull across the bridges with great power, pressing down against the board, in order that the vibration may be more abundant and the whole of it come into the sounding-board, where it is reinforced by the natural resonance of the wood and so transferred to the atmosphere. The board is put in "crowning," as it is called, or convex, and the tendency of the strings, combined with the progressive desiccation of the wood, is to crush out this convexity, which, being done, the tone becomes flabby.

The American pianofortes are generally recognized as larger, more sonorous, and in several respects better than most foreign ones; and our leading houses are generally regarded as leading all the world. Particularly is this true because of the large number of important improvements in the instrument made by the leading makers, in which they have been generally followed by all other good makers, American as well as foreign. In America there is a great development of the industry of making pianofortes of moderate price, in which respect, combining fair tonal qualities with showy appearance and durability, American makers lead the world. These lower-priced instruments generally make a fair imitation of the qualities of the best, and the makers have shown great progressiveness in finding ways of doing this within the limitation of expense. The best pianoforte depends for its success, after the maker has secured a good scale, and the requisite solidity, upon the sounding-board and its treatment, and upon the hammers. These two elements are matters of individual adjustment by highly skilled labor, of artistic instinct, and even then the final result is somewhat uncertain, exactly as in making violins, or any other apparatus in which results are obtained by a skilled adjustment of parts cooperating with individualities of material. This being the case, it is not likely that the gap between the pleasing pianofortes of commercial grade, and the exceptional tonal qualities of the very best, can ever be very much narrowed.

The pianoforte owes its popularity to its success in representing all properties of music. Melody, harmony, expression, and some degree of singing quality and tone-color are placed by it at the disposal of the player, and upon it he is able to give an intelligible account of by far a larger variety of music, both high and low, than upon any other musical instrument.

Down to about 1872 the square pianoforte was the form mainly current in America. The first American grand pianoforte was made by Jonas Chickering in 1828. About 1870 improvements in the upright resulted in perfecting this form, whereby, combined with solidity, the tonal capacity very nearly approached that of the grand, and this form therefore came more and more to the head, so that at the present time there are no square pianos made, except to special order. The advantage which the grand piano possesses over the upright is in having a larger sounding-board, greater solidity, and consequently a larger and more sympathetic tone. The action also has one additional lever between the finger and the hammer, whereby the touch is magnified and a smaller effort of the player effects a perceptible modification of the tone. The manufacture and sale of grand pianofortes has enormously increased in recent years.

Pian-pianissimo (pē-än'pē-ä-nēs'sĭ-mō), It. Exceedingly soft and gentle.

Pian-piano (pē-än-pē-ä'nō), It. Very softly, with a low voice. See Piano-piano.

Pianoforte action. The mechanism of a pianoforte.

Pianoforte hammer. That part of the mechanism of a pianoforte which strikes the wires.

Pianoforte score. The score, or music, of an orchestral or choral work, arranged condensed upon two staves convenient for performance upon the pianoforte. The pianoforte arrangement of an orchestral work contains as much of the music as the arranger believes practicable for the player. The pianoforte score of a choral work includes the vocal parts upon their own staves and the orchestral parts condensed upon two staves, as in the arrangements from orchestral works. Hence, for purposes of study, except where it is a question of tone-color and the art of instrumentation, the pianoforte score offers all necessary advantages.

Piano mezzo (pē-ä'nō mĕt'zō), It. Moderately soft.

Piano-piano (pē-ä'nō-pē-ä'no), It. Very soft.

Piano sempre staccato e marcato il basso (pē-ä'nō sĕm-prē stäk-kä'tō mär-kä'tō ēl bäs'sō), It. Soft, with the bass always well marked and detached.

Piano solo. For the pianoforte only.

Piano-violino (pē-ä'nō vē-ō-lē'nō), It. A curious instrument, invented in 1837. It was a common piano, containing a violin arrangement inside of it, which was set in motion by a pedal. When this instrument was played upon it gave the sound of both violin and piano.

Piatti (pē-ät'tē), It. pl. Cymbals.

Pib (pēb), Wel. A pipe, a fife.

Pibcorn, or. hornpipe. The name given by the Welsh to a wind instrument consisting of a wooden pipe with holes at the sides and a horn at each end, the one to collect the wind blown into it by the mouth, and the other to carry off the sounds as modulated by the performer.

Pibroch (pē'brŏh). A wild, irregular species of music, peculiar to the Highlands of Scotland, performed on the bagpipe.

Picchiettato (pē-kĭ-ĕt-tä'tō), It. Scattered, detached; in violin-playing a staccato made by means of the bow bounding upon the strings; hence not nearly so short as the staccato made by plucking the strings (pizziccato). The picchiettato implies a duration about equal to three quarters of the apparent duration of the note. Picchiettato is indicated by means of a straight mark over the note and a dot under the mark, or a slur over several notes and a dot over each one. The corresponding effect upon the pianoforte might be produced by playing several tones with one finger.

Picciolo (pēt-tshĭ-ō'lō),
Piccolino (pē-kō-lē'nō), It. } Small, little.
Piccolo (pē'kō-lō),

Piccolo. A 2-feet organ-stop, of wood pipes, producing a bright and clear tone, in unison with the fifteenth.

Piccolo flute. A small flute.

Piccolo pianoforte. A small upright pianoforte.

Pièce (pĭ-ās'), Fr. A composition or piece of music; an opera or drama.

Pieds (pĭ-ā'), Fr. pl. The foot; avec les pieds, with the feet, in organ-playing.

Piena (pē-ā'nä), Pieno (pē-ā-nō), It. } Full.

Pienamente (pē-ā-nä-mĕn'tē), It. Fully.

Pieno coro (pē-ā'nō kō'rō), It. A full chorus.

Pieno organo (pē-ā'nō ōr-gä'nō), It. With the full organ.

Pieta (pē-ā'tä),
Pietosamente (pē-ā-tō-zä-mĕn'tē),
Pietoso (pē-ā-tō'zō), It.
Compassionately, tenderly; implying, also, a rather slow and sustained movement.

Pifara (pē-fä'rä), It. A fife.

Pifferare (pĭf-fĕ-rä'rĕ), It. To play upon the fife; also a piper, such as, in Italy, play pastoral airs in the streets at Christmas. One of these airs forms the basis of Handel's Pastoral Symphony in the "Messiah."

Pifferina (pĭf-fĕ-rē'nä), It. A little fife.

Piffero (pĭf'fĕ-rō), It. A fife, or small flute; also an organ-stop of 4 feet.

Pincé (păṅh-sā), Fr. Pinched; an ornament called a mordent. See Pizzicato.

Pincer (păṅh-sā), Fr. To play upon a musical instrument.

Pinces (păṅh-s), Fr. A general name for stringed instruments.

Pipe. Any tube formed of a reed, or of metal, or of wood, which, being blown at one end, produces a musical sound. The pipe, which was originally no more than a simple oaten straw, was one of the earliest instruments by which musical sounds were attempted.

Piper. A performer on the pipe. Pipers were formerly one of the class of itinerant musicians, and performed on a variety of wind instruments, as the bagpipe, musette, etc.

Piqué (pĭ-kā'), Piquer (pĭ-kā'), Fr. } To play on the violin, etc., a series of notes a little staccato, and with a light pressure of the bow to each note.

Piquiren (pē-kē'r'n), Ger. Detached; equivalent to picchiettato.

Piston. A kind of valve used in brass instruments to alter the pitch.

Pitch. The acuteness, or gravity, of any particular sound, or the tuning of any instrument.

Pitch, concert. The pitch generally adopted for some one given note, and by which every other note is governed. American concert pitch at the present time (1895) is based upon an A having 431 vibrations.

Pitchpipe. An instrument formerly used to sound the keynote of any vocal composition.

Piu (pē'oo), It. More.

Piu allegro (pē'oo äl-lā'grō), It. A little quicker, more lively.

Pneumatic (nū-măt'ĭk). Relating to the air or wind; a term applied to all wind instruments collectively.

Pneumatic action. } Mechanism intended to Pneumatic lever. } lighten the touch, etc., in large organs. The pneumatic lever consisted of a bellows about three inches by fourteen, which became inflated whenever the corresponding organ-key was depressed. Inasmuch as only a small valve was needed to inflate such a bellows, the touch was very light. The bellows opened the pallet, admitting wind to the corresponding pipes. The saving in elasticity and lightness of touch was very important in large organs, where, without some such appliance, a weight of several pounds is sometimes necessary to operate a key. There was a certain loss of time and of precise attack, which was reduced to a minimum by increasing the pressure of the wind operating the pneumatic lever. It was invented by one Barker in 1837, and greatly improved by Ira Bassett in 1888. The pneumatic lever is now displaced by a pneumatic action, which accomplishes the same result much better by means of a small pneumatic under every pipe. These are now operated by electricity.

Pneumatic organ. An organ moved by wind, so named by the ancients to distinguish it from the hydraulic organ, moved by water.

Quadruple. Fourfold.

Quadruple counterpoint. Counterpoint in four parts, all of which may be inverted, and each of them taken as a bass, middle, or high part.

Quadruple croche (kăd-rüpl krōsh), Fr. }
Quadruple quaver. } Four-hooked; a half-demisemiquaver, or semidemisemiquaver.

Quadruplo (kwä'droo-plō), It. In four parts.

Quantity. The relative duration of notes or syllables.

Quarta (kwär'tä), It. } A fourth; also the Quarto (kwär'tō), It. } fourth voice, or instrumental part.

Quart de soupir (kär dŭh soo-pēr), Fr. A semiquaver rest.

Quarte (kärt), Fr. Quarte (kwär'tĕ), Ger. } A fourth.

Quarter-note. A black note with a stem. Its duration is equal to one quarter of a whole note.

Quarter-rest. A pause equal in duration to a quarter-note.

Quarter tone. A small interval, approximately equal to one quarter of a diatonic second. Several intervals of this character arise enharmonically, when it is attempted to carry out musical pitches into remote keys according to the mathematical exactness of pure harmonic intervals. Approximately the interval between C♯ and D♭ is a quarter-step; in some cases, but not in all, according to the manner in which the several pitches are arrived at.

Quartes (kärt), Fr. Fourths.

Quartet } A composition
Quartett (kwär-tĕtt), Ger. } for four voices
Quartetto (kwär-tĕt'tō), It. } or instruments.

Quartet, stringed. A quartet, or composition, arranged for four stringed instruments, consisting of first and second violins, viola, and violoncello.

Quartettino (kwär-tĕt-tē'nō), It. A short quartet.

Quartet, wood. A quartet consisting of the flute, oboe, clarinet, and bassoon.

Quartfagott (kwärt'fä-gŏt'), Ger. } An old
Quart-fagotto (kwärt fä-gŏt'tō), It. } sort of bassoon, formerly used as a tenor to the hautboy; called, also, Dulcino and Dulzain.

Quartflöte (kwärt'flö'tĕ), Ger. A flute sounding a fourth above.

Quartgeige (kwärt'ghī-ghĕ), Ger. A small violin, a fourth above the usual violin. Piccolo violin.

Quarto (kwär'tō), It. The fourth; the quarter-note.

Quartsextaccord (kwärt'sĕxt-äk-kōrd'), Ger. Chord of the sixth and fourth; second inversion of the triad.

Quasi (kwä'zē), It. In the manner of, in the style of.

Quasi allegretto (kwä'zē äl-lĕ-grĕt'tō), It. Like an allegretto.

Quasi andante (kwä'zē än-dän'tē), It. In the style of an andante.

Quasi presto (kwä-zĭ prĕs'tō), It. Like a presto.

Quasi recitativo (kwä'zĭ rä-tshĭ-tä-tē'vō), It. Resembling a recitative.

Quasi una fantasia (kwä'zĭ oo'nä fän-tä'zĭ-ä), It. As if it were a fantasia.

Quatrain. A stanza of four lines rhyming alternately.

Quatre (kätr), Fr. } Four; a quatre mains,
Quattro (kwät'trō), It. } or, a quattro mani, for four hands; a pianoforte duet.

Quattricoma (kwät'trĭ-kō'mä), It. A demi-semiquaver.

Quatuor (kwä'too-ōr), Lat. A quartet.

Quaver. A note equal to half a crotchet.

Quaver-rest. A mark of silence equal in value to an eighth-note.

Querflöte (kwär'flö'tĕ), Ger. German flute. See Flauto traverso.

Querpfeife (kwär'pfī'fĕ), Ger. A fife.

Querstand (kwär'ständ), Ger. False relation; in harmony. A chromatic tone not prepared in the same voice. See False relation.

Querstriche (kwär'strĭ'khĕ), Ger. Ledger lines.

Questa (kwäs'tä), It. } This, or that.
Questo (kwäs'tō), It. }

Queue (kū), Fr. The tail, or stem, of a note; also the tailpiece of a violin, etc.

Quickstep. A lively march, generally in 2-4 time.

Quieto (kwē-ā'tō), It. Quiet, calm, serene.

Quills. The plectrums, or instruments formerly used instead of the fingers in playing upon the harp, guitar, etc.

Quinque (kwĭn'kwĕ), Lat. Five.

Quint (kwĭnt), Lat. } A fifth; also the name
Quinta (kwēn'tä), It. } of an organ-stop
Quinte (känht), Fr. } sounding a fifth, or Quinte (kwĭn'tĕ), Ger. } twelfth, above the foundation stops. The E string of the violin.

Quintadena. An organ-stop of wood, voiced between a stopped diapason and a gamba.

Quintaton (kwĭn'tä-tōn'), Ger. A manual organ-stop of 8-feet tone; a stopped diapason of rather small scale producing the twelfth, as well as the ground tone; it also occurs as a pedal-stop of 2- and 16-feet tone.

Quintbass. An organ pedal-stop. See Quint.

Quintenzirkel (kwĭn'tĕn-tsĭr'k'l), Ger. Circle of fifths, beginning with any tone and returning through a succession of fifths and octaves to the same tone, or one enharmonic with it. The Quintenzirkel beginning with C returns to B♯ after twelve fifths.

Quintet. A composition for five voices or instruments.

Quintetto (kwēn-tĕt'tō), It. } A quintet.
Quintette (känh-tĕt), Fr. }

Quint-fagott (kwēnt' fä-gŏt'), It. The small bassoon or fagottina, sounding a fifth higher than the common bassoon.

Quintgedackt (kwĭnt'ghĕ-däkt'), Ger. An organ-stop of the stopped-diapason species, sounding the fifth above.

Quintoire (känh-twär), Fr. An old French term applied to a species of descant consisting chiefly of fifths.

Quintole (kwĭn'tō-lē), Lat. A group of five notes, having the same value as four of the same species.

Quintuple. A species of time now seldom used, containing five parts in a bar.

Quire. A choir, a body of singers; that part of a church where the choristers sit. See Choir.

Qui tollis (kwĭ tŏl'lĭs), Lat. "Thou who takest away the sins of the world." A part of the Gloria.

Quodlibet (kwŏd'lĭ-bĕt), Lat. A medley of airs, etc., out of different works, or by various composers; a musical potpourri.

Quoniam Tu solus (quō'nĭ-ăm too sō'loos), Lat. "Thou only art holy." Part of the Gloria.

R, or, R. H. Indicates the right hand in pianoforte-playing.

Rabani (rä-bä'nē). } A species of tam-
Rabbana (rä-bä'nä). } bourine used by the negroes.

Rabbia (räb'bĭ-ä), It. Rage, fury, madness.

Raccourcir (rä-coor-sēr), Fr. To abridge.

Rackett, or, Rankett (räk'kĕt), Ger. (1) A family of wood wind instruments, long ago obsolete. (2) Obsolete names for organ-stops, generally reed-pipes of 8- or 16-feet pitch.

Rackettfagott (räk'kĕt-fä-gŏt'), Ger. A kind of bassoon, now obsolete. It belonged to the bombarde family.

Racler (räk-lā), Fr. To scrape. Said of a poor player.

Racleur (rä-klŭr), Fr. A poor player.

Raddolcendo (räd-dōl-tshĕn'dō), It. } With in-Raddolcente (räd-dōl-tshen'tĕ), } creasing softness; becoming softer by degrees.

Raddoppiamento (räd-dŏp-pĭ-ä-mĕn'tō), It. Augmentation; reduplication; the doubling of an interval.

Raddoppiato (räd-dŏp-pĭ-ä'tō), It. Doubled, increased, augmented.

Radical bass. The fundamental bass; the roots of the various chords.

Raggione (räd-jĭ-ō'nĕ), It. Ratio; proportion.

Ragoke. A small Russian horn.

Rallentamento (räl-lĕn-tä-mĕn'tō), Rallentando (räl-lĕn-tän'dō), Rallentato (räl-lĕn-tä'tō), It. The time gradually slower, and the sound gradually softer.

Rallentando assai (räl-lĕn-tän'dō äs-sä'ĭ), It. A great slackening of the time.

Ranz des vaches (ränh dĕ väsh), Fr. Pastoral airs played by the Swiss herdsmen, to assemble their cattle together for the return home.

Rapidamente (rä-pē-dä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Rapidly.

Rapidamente e brillante (rä-pē-dä-mĕn'tĕ ā brĭl-län'tĕ), It. Rapidly and brilliantly.

Rapidita (rä-pē-dĭ-tä'), It. Rapidity.

Rapido (rä'pĭ-dō), It. Rapid.

Rapsodie (răp-sō-dē'), Fr. } A capriccio, a
Rapsody (răp'sō-dy), Eng. } fragmentary piece, a wild, unconnected composition.

Rasch (räsh), Ger. Swift, spirited.

Rasegesang (rä'zĕ-ghĕ-zäng'), Raselied (rä'zĕ-lēd'), Ger. } A wild song, a dithyrambic.

Räthselcanon (räth'sĕl-kä-nŏn), Ger. Enigmatic canon. A canon written upon a single line, without marks to indicate where the following voices should enter.

Rattenendo (rät-tĕ-nĕn'dō), Rattenuto (rät-tĕ-noo'tō), It. } Holding back, restraining the time.

Rattezza (rät-tĕt'sä), It. Swiftness, rapidity.

Raucedine (rä-oo-tshĕ-dē'nĕ), It. Hoarseness.

Rauco (rä-oo-kō), It. Hoarse, harsh.

Rauh (rou), Ger. Rauque (rōk), Fr. } Rough.

Rauscher (row'sher), Ger. A passage in which every two tones are several times repeated.

Rauschflöte (roush'flō'tĕ), Ger. A mixture stop of two ranks of pipes, sounding the twelfth and fifteenth.

Rauschpfeife (roush'pfī-fĕ), Rauschquint (roush'quĭnt), Ger. } Rustling fifth; a mixture-stop in German organs, the twelfth and fifteenth on one slide.

Ravanastron. A very simple form of bow instrument, common in the East.

Ravvivando (räv-vĭ-vän'dō), It. Reviving quickening, accelerating.

Ravvivando il tempo (räv-vĭ-vän'dō ĭl tĕm'pō), It. Accelerating the time.

Re (rā). A syllable applied in solfaing to the second degree of the major scale, or in France and Italy to the note D, irrespective of key place.

Reading music. The art of recognizing and feeling musical effects from the written notation.

Rebec. Rebecca. } A Moorish word signifying an instrument with two strings played with a bow. The Moors brought the rebec into Spain, whence it passed into Italy, and after the addition of a third string obtained the name of rebecca, whence the old English rebec, or fiddle with three strings.

Rebecchino (rā-bĕk-kē'nō), It. Small rebec guitar.

Re bémol (rĕ bā-mōl), Fr. The note D♭.

Re bémol majeur (rā bā-mōl mä-zhŭr), Fr. The key of D♭ major.

Rebab. } A rebec.
Rebeb. }

Recension (rā-tsänh-sĭ-ŏnh), Fr. An analytical criticism. Also used of careful or analytical editing.

Recheat. An old term for a series of notes which huntsmen sound on a horn to recall the dogs from a false scent.

Recherché (rĕ-shĕr-shā), Fr. Rare, affected, formal.

Recht (rĕkht), Ger. Right.

Rechte Hand (rĕkh'tĕ händ), Ger. Right hand.

Recit (rā-sēt), Fr. Recitative.

Recitado (rā-tsĭ-tä'dō), Sp. Recitative.

Recital. A recital of choice music by a solo artist. Distinguished from concert by being exclusively musical, the idea of display not entering into the concept.

Recitando (rā-tshĭ-tän'dō), It. } Declamatory,
Recitante (rā-tshĭ-tän'tē), } in the style of a recitative.

Recitatif (rĕ-sĭ-tä-tēf'), Fr.
Recitativ (rĕ-tsĭ-tä tif'), Ger.
Recitativo (rĕ-tshĭ-tä-tē'vō), It. } Recitative.

Recitative (rĕ-sĭ-tä-tēv'). A musical form in which a text is recited to musical cadence. Recitative ranges all the way in musical quality, from the recitativo secco (dry recitative), in which aided simply by a chord now and then for insuring the intonation, the musical cadence seeks merely to deliver the text effectively, up to a recitativo accompagnato stromentato (accompanied and instrumented recitative), in which the musical phrases have perceptible melodic quality, while the instrumentation colors and intensifies the dramatic effect. The latter variety approaches very nearly to arioso, and shades into it by imperceptible degrees. To mention a familiar example, the four recitatives in Handel's "Messiah," narrating the appearance of the angels to the shepherds, afford two examples of recitativo secco, and two of recitativo accompagnato. In operatic recitative the instrumental accompaniment often plays an important part; even where the vocal phrases themselves are not highly accompanied, the instrumental interlude often takes on a highly dramatic coloring. All the old operas of Mozart's time, and before, have a great deal of recitativo secco, which is generally accompanied by the 'cello only. In the latter works of Wagner there is little or no recitative of this character, but an accompanied recitative, or more properly arioso, takes its place. In the first operas (Peri's "Eurydice") a similar usage prevailed, but with the difference that in Peri's mere verbal delivery is the end sought in the musical cadence, whereas in Wagner the accompaniment rises to symphonic elaboration in the effort to interpret the feeling of the text, and the whole form is intensely musical as well as dramatic in the best sense.

Recitative accompanied. A recitative is said to be accompanied when, besides the bass, there are parts for other instruments, as violins, flutes, hautboys, etc.

Recitativo instrumentato (rĕ-tshĭ-tä-tē'vō ĭn-strō-mĕn-tä'tō), It. Accompanied recitative.

Recitativo parlante (rĕ-tshĭ-tä-tē'vō pär-län'tĕ), } It.
Recitativo secco (rĕ-tshĭ-tä-tē'vō sĕk'kō), } Unaccompanied recitative; also, when accompanied only by the violoncello and double bass, or the pianoforte or organ.

Recitativo stromentato (rĕ-tshĭ-tä-tē'vō strō-mĕn-ta-tō. Recitative accompanied by the orchestra. See Recitativo instromentato.

Rezitativzug (rĕ-tsĭ-tä-tēf'tsoog), Ger. Recitative stop.

Recitazione (rĕ-tshĭ- tä- tsĭ-ō' nĕ), It. Recitation.

Réciter (rā-sĭ-tä'). Fr. To recite.

Reciting note. The note in a chant upon which the voice dwells until it comes to a cadence.

Recorder. An old wind instrument of the flageolet kind, but of smaller bore and shriller tone. Mentioned in Shakespeare.

Recreation. A composition of attractive style, designed to relieve the tediousness of practice; an amusement.

Recréations musicales (rĕk-rā-ä'sĭ-ŏnh mü-zĭ-käl'), Fr. Musical recreations.

Recte (rĕk'tĕ), Lat. Right, straight, forward

Recte et retro (rĕk'tĕ ĕt rā'trō), Lat. Forward, then backward; the subject, or melody, reversed, note for note.

Reddita (rĕd-dē'tä), It. } Return to the subject; repetition of a melody.
Redita (rĕ-dē'tä), }

Rédièse (rā-dē-āz), Fr. } Re sharp. D♯.
Rediesis (rā dē-ä'sēs), It. }

Redondilla (rĕ-dŏn-dēl'yä), Sp. A roundelay; a stanza of four lines of eight syllables each.

Redowa (rĕ'dŏ-wä). } A Bohemian
Redowak (rĕ'dŏ-wäk) } dance, in 2-4 and Redowazka (rĕ'dŏ-wäts-kä). } 3-4 time alternately. Modern redowas confine themselves to 3-4 measure.

Redublicato (rĕ-doob-lĭ-kä'tō), It. Redoubled.

Reduciren (rĕ'doo-tsĭr'ĕn), Ger. To reduce, or arrange, a full instrumental score, for a smaller band, or for the pianoforte or organ.

Reed. The flat piece of cane placed on the beak, or mouthpiece, of the clarinet and bassethorn; this is called a single reed. The double reed is the mouthpiece of the hautboy, English horn and bassoon, formed of two pieces of cane joined together. Organs and reed organs have metal reeds of different forms, called "free" and "impinging," or striking, reeds. The free reed consists of a small socket of brass and a vibrating tongue, one end of which swings entirely through the socket at each vibration. In reed-organs the reed obtains large resonance from the wooden reed-board, which acts as sounding-board. The organ-reed obtains its resonance from the pipe which it causes to vibrate. And the voice is determined in part by the shape and size of this pipe. The impinging, or striking, reed is used only in the organ (for trumpet, oboe, and cornopeon-stops). Its tongue strikes against the opening into the pipe, which it completely covers, instead of playing through it, as in the free reed. Its tone is, therefore, very much more metallic and snarly. Organ-reeds of both varieties are tuned by a sliding wire, which shortens or lengthens the vibrating portion of the tongue, in order to adjust the intonation of the reed to that of the other parts of the instrument. Free reeds are much more apt to be out of tune than impinging reeds, but their tone when in tune is much better. The reeds in reed-organs are permanent, and do not get out of tune except through weakening of the metal tongue, which happens after much use, or through the development of flaws in the metal. In brass instruments, of the horn and trumpet class the lips of the player perform the function of a reed. The human voice is also a reed instrument.

Reed instruments. Instruments whose sounds are produced by the action of air upon reeds formed of metal or wood.

Reed pipe. A pipe formed of reed, used singly or in numbers, as the pipes of Pan, in ancient times, or in connection with other kinds of pipes, as in the organ.

Reed-stops. Organ-stops in which the sound is made by reeds.

Reel. A lively Scotch dance. Originally the term Rhay, or Reel, was applied to a very ancient English dance, called the Hay. The reel is generally in 4-4 measure, but sometimes in 6-8. See Rhay.

Refrain. The burden of a song; a ritornel; a repeat.

Regal. A portable organ, used in former times in religious processions.

Regel (rā'g'l), Ger. Rule.

Regens chori (rā'gĕns kō'rī), Lat. The choirmaster in German churches.

Regimental band. A company of musicians attached to a regiment; a military band.

Regina cœli (rā-gē'nä tsā'lī), Lat. Queen of Heaven; a hymn to the Virgin.

Register. The stops, or rows of pipes, in an organ; also applied to the high, low, or middle parts, or divisions, of the voice; also the compass of a voice or instrument.

Registering. The management of the stops in an organ.

Registerstimme (rĕ-ghĭs'tĕr-stĭm'mĕ), Ger. Speaking-stops of an organ, as distinguished from mechanical stops (couplers, etc.).

Registre (rĕg ĕstr'), Fr. } Registro (rĕ-jĕs'trō), It. } Register, draw-stop.

Registrirung (rā-ghĭs-trē'roong), Ger. The art of registration.

Rehearsal (rē-hĕr'săl). A trial, or practice, previous to a public performance.

Reihen (rī'ĕn), Ger. Song, dance.

Reihentanz (rī'ĕn-tänts'), Ger. Circular dance.

Rein (rīn), Ger. Pure, clear, perfect; kurz und rein, distinct and clear.

Reine Stimme (rī'nĕ stĭm'mĕ), Ger. Clear voice.

Reiselied (rī'zĕ-lēd'), Ger. A traveling song; a pilgrim's hymn, or song.

Related. A term applied to those chords, modes, or keys, which, by reason of their affinity and close relation, admit of an easy and natural transition from one to the other.

Relation. That connection which any two sounds have with one another in respect of the interval which they form.

Relation of keys. Affinity of keys, arising from the identity of one or more chords appertaining to both. The relationship becomes closer and closer according to the number of such coincidences. According to modern usage all keys are related, and there is scarcely any chord which might not, in some way, follow any other. It is obvious, however, entire keys are related in proportion to the number of chords they have in common. For it is a very different thing to introduce a single strange chord (which may be taken as belonging to the chromatic key) and to bodily go into the entire foreign key to which such a chord ostensibly belongs. See Modulation.

Relatio non harmonica (rĕ-lā'tsĭ-ō nōn härmō'nĭ-kä), Lat. False relation.

Relative keys. Keys which only differ by one sharp, or flat, or which have the same signatures.

Religiosamente (rĕ-lē-jĭ-ō-zä-mĕn'tĕ), It. } Religioso (rĕ-lē-jĭ-ō'zō), } Religiously, solemnly, in a devout manner

Re majeur (rā mä-zhŭr), Fr. D major.

Re mineur (rā mē-nŭr), Fr. D minor.

Remote keys. Those keys whose scales have few tones in common, as the key of C and the key of D♭.

Remplissage (rănh-plĭ-säzh), Fr. Filling up; the middle parts; also a term applied to the decorative flourishes introduced in concertos and bravura airs.

Rentrée (rănh-trā), Fr. Return; reentry of the subject or theme.

Renversement (rănh-vĕrs-mănh), Fr. An inversion.

Renverser (ranh-vĕr-sā), Fr. To invert.

Renvoi (rănh-vwä), Fr. A repeat; the mark of repetition.

Repeat 8va. Repeat an octave higher.

Repeat. Two or more dots to the left or right of a double bar, indicating that certain measures or passages on the same side of the bar are to be sung or played twice.

Sign of Repetition.

Repercussio (rĕ-pĕr-koos'sĭ-ō), Lat. The answer, in a fugue.

Repercussion. A frequent repetition of the same sound. A technical term in fugue, to denote the reappearance of the subject.

Repertoire (rā-pĕr-twär), Fr. Repertory. The entire list of works ready for performance, or practicable after certain preparation.

Répertoire de l'opéra (rā-pĕr-twär dŭh lō-pā'rä), Fr. A collection of pieces from an opera.

Repetent (rĕ-pē-tĕnt'), Ger. A teacher who conducts the rehearsals.

Repetimento (rĕ-pĕ-tĭ-mĕn'tō), It. } Repeti-Repetizione (rĕ-pĕ-tĭ-tsĭ-ō'nĕ), It. } tion.

Répétition (rā-pā-tē-sĭ-ŏnh), Fr. Rehearsal; repetition.

Repetitore (rĕ-pĕ-tĭ-tō'rĕ), It. The director of a rehearsal.

Replica (rā' plĭ-kä), It. Reply, repetition. See also Repercussio.

Replicato (rĕ-plĭ-kä'tō), It. Repeated.

Replique (rā-plēk), Fr. (1) Octave. (2) Answer (in fugue). (3) Interval arising from inversion. (4) Small notes inserted in a part to guide the performer.

Reply. The answer, in fugue.

Réponse (rā-pŏnhs), Fr. The answer, in a fugue. The subject very slightly modified so as to lead back to the tonic.

Repos (rā-pō), Fr. A pause.

Reprise (rā'prēz), Fr. The burden of a song; a repetition, or return, to some previous part; in old music, when a strain was repeated, it was called a reprise.

Requiem (rā' kwĭ-ĕm), Lat. A mass, or musical service, for the dead.

Resin. Rosin.

Resolutio (rĕz-ō-loo'tsĭ-ō), Lat. Resolution.

Resolution. The solution of a dissonance. All dissonances are temporary substitutions in place of consonant tones, and the resolution generally consists of the progression of the dissonant tone one step to the consonant tone which it displaced. See Dissonance.

Resoluzione (rĕs-ō-loo-tsĭ-ō'nĕ), It. Resolution, decision, firmness; also the progression from a discord to a concord.

Resonance. The answering of one sound to another. Every sounding body resonates or answers to all tones which it contains itself. A room resonates or echoes to such tones as are part of its natural tone. Every piano-string, when the dampers are raised, resonates or answers every other string which produces its own tone or one of its partials. The human head resonates according to the clearness of the cavities and the direction of the tone formed in the throat. An echo is not a resonance. An echo is merely a reflection of sound-waves, and not an answer with waves newly created.

Resonanzboden (rĕ-sō-nänts'bō'd'n), Ger. Resonance bodies. The sounding-board of a pianoforte, etc.

Response. Response, or answer, of the choir. The name of a kind of anthem sung in the Roman Catholic Church after the morning lesson. In a fugue the response is the repetition of the given subject by another part.

Responsivo (rĕ-spōn-sē'vō), It. Responsively.

Responsorien (rĕ-spōn-sō'rĭ-ĕn),
Responsorium (rĕ-spōn-sō'rĭ-oom), Lat. }
Responsum (rĕ-spōn'soom),
See Response.

Resserrement (rĕs-sär'mänh), Fr. See Stretto.

Rest. Rhythmic silence. Characters indicating rhythmic silence. During rest the rhythm goes right on, and this circumstance distinguishes musical rest from mere cessation. Rests correspond in denomination and value to all the different forms of note.

Whole Half Quarter 8th 16th 32d 64th

Rests may be augmented by dots and double dots, exactly the same as notes.

Restrictio (rĕ-strĭk'tĭ-ō), Lat. The stretto in a fugue.

Resultant tones. Tones formed by the coincidences of vibrations when two tones are sounding together. These tones were first discovered by the violinist Tartini, who used them as a guide to correct intonation in double stopping far up the fingerboard. They may easily be observed upon the reed organ by taking a single set of reeds and prolonging E and G (4th and 5th spaces of the treble staff) forte. A low humming will presently be heard, which, upon comparison, will be found to be middle C. Upon changing to D and F, one degree lower, the humming will change to B♭.

Resurrexit (rā-sŭr-rĕx'ĭt), Lat. "And rose again." Part of the Credo of the Mass.

Retard. To gradually slacken the movement. A retard denotes the dying away of the impulse immediately producing the strain, and is generally preparatory to a new strain following, or else preparatory to the final close. A retard is gradual and cumulative in character, slackening the movement very gradually, and completing the slackening upon the note preceding the resumption of the new idea, if there be one. The common mistake is to retard too suddenly, and too soon. As a rule every retard in music is prepared by an accelerando a little time previously, in approaching the climax after which the retard generally comes.

Retardando (rĕ-tär-dän'dō), It. A retarding of the movement.

Retardation. Slackening, or retarding the time; also a suspension, in harmony, prolonging some note of a previous chord into the succeeding one.

Retraite (rĕ-trāt), Fr. Retreat; tattoo, in military music.

Retro (rē-trō'), Lat. Backward, the melody reversed, note for note.

Retrograde (rĕ'trō-grād'). Going backward.

Retrograde. An imitation repeating the subject note for note, backwards, beginning with the last note.

Retrogrado (rā- trō-grä'dō), It. Retrograde, going backward.

Retto (rĕt'tō), It. Right, straight, direct.

Réveille (rĕ-vā'yĕ), Fr. Awaking, a military morning signal; also horn music played early in the morning to awake the hunter.

Reversed. An imitation repeating a melodic motion in opposite direction, answering upward progressions with downwards, and the like. The union of retrograde and reversed imitation gives an imitation in which the subject is repeated note for note backwards, and in opposite direction of up and down. These are merely mechanical devices for securing something apparently new in the working out of a fugue or thematic group.

Reversed motion. Imitation by contrary motion, in which the ascending intervals are changed into descending and vice versa.

Revoice. To repair an organ-pipe so as to restore its proper quality of tone.

R. H. In pianoforte music used to indicate the right hand.

Rhapsodie (räp-sō-dē'), Ger. } See Rapsodie.
Rhapsody. }

Rhapsodists. Greek minstrels, of the time of Homer and later.

Rhythm. }
Rhythmus (rĭt'moos), Ger. } Measured movement in time. All music begins by selecting a certain key, or group of chords, within which, or in relation to which, all the melodic and harmonic movements take place. In like manner it also selects a certain rate of pulsation and a certain measure, within which, or in relation to which, all the rhythm of the piece takes place. Hence, in general, the rhythm of a piece of music is the time motion against the background of pulsation and measure. A rhythm is said to be completed when it reaches a symmetrical grouping and closes with an accent. This is also sometimes called a rhythmus. In orchestral works, and in elaborate pianoforte works, several rhythms are going on at the same time. This appears in simple pieces, where there is a rhythm of the melody as such, a rhythm of the accompaniment, and a rhythm of the two together.

Romantic. Interesting, strange, exciting. In poetry applied to the movement beginning near the close of the eighteenth century, Goethe and Schiller being the leading exponents. In music to a similar tendency to make thought free and truly responsive to the inner life. Hence in music the works of Chopin, Schumann, and others, which were measurably free from classical restrictions and carried out their ideas in any direction the fancy took them; whereas Bach and the composers before him were constantly hampered by the ideal of treating a selected musical idea in a certain manner, which in the hands of common composers became merely pedantic and learned. According to some philosophers the essence of the romantic spirit differs from the classic in this: That, whereas the ideal of classical art was to represent the eternal and ideal, the idea of the romantic is that everything which the individual experiences is of interest to the whole race. Hence a vastly greater latitude of styles and forms.

Scherz (shärts), Ger. } Play, sport, jest. A
Scherzo (skĕr'tsō), It. } name given to a great variety of instrumental compositions, and indicative of their character rather than their form. Scherzi occur as single pieces, as items of sets of pieces (partite, etc.), and as movements of larger compositions. The scherzo was introduced into the sonata towards the end of the last century, and soon after also into the symphony and other kindred forms, where it frequently takes the place of the minuet. Its form in the sonata, etc., was at first that of the minuet (a first division of two parts; a second division, or trio, of two parts, and a repetition of the first division); afterwards this form was developed and treated with greater freedom. This developed minuet-form is the most common form of the scherzo; but there are scherzi with two trios, scherzi in form resembling that of the first movement of a sonata, and scherzi irregularly and fantastically constructed. Triple measure is oftenest to be met with, more especially 3-4 measure, but also 2-4 time occurs.

Score. An arrangement of the vocal and instrumental parts of a composition in equal lines, with bars drawn across the entire number (whence the name "score") in such a way as to present the whole detail to the eye at once. A piano score of a vocal work contains all the voice parts, each on its own staff, and the pianoforte accompaniment. The copy of an opera for piano solo is not a score, but an arrangement, since the vocal parts are not shown. The only kind of copy to which the term score applies without limitation is the full orchestra score, which also contains all the vocal parts. This is the score, or German Partitur. Composers generally write first a piano score, indicating the leading instruments for each motive as it occurs. From this the full score is afterwards developed, and in carrying out the instruments complete much detail is often added, leading later to a new piano score, in which the salient parts of this detail are included. The term score does not properly apply to the printed copy of a pianoforte composition. But a "score" of a trio, quartette, or even a composition for two pianos, whenever the copy contains all the parts, is correct.

Scorrendo (skōr-rĕn'dō), It. Gliding from one sound into another.

Scotch scale. The pentatonic scale, consisting of the tones do, re, mi, sol, la, do. Many Scotch melodies are mainly confined to this selection of tones in key, whence the term Scotch.

Scotch snap. A peculiarity in Scotch tunes, and those written in imitation of the Scotch character. It is the lengthening of the time of a second note at the expense of the one before it, placing a semiquaver before a dotted quaver. It gives emphasis and spirit to dance tunes, and, when well applied, has a lively effect.

Sechzehntel (sĕkh'tsān-tĕl), Ger. Semiquaver.

Sechzehntelpause (sĕkh-tsān'-tĕl-pou'zĕ), Ger. A semiquaver rest.

Second. The interval between any tone of the scale and the next above, or below. It derives its name from the fact that in reckoning intervals both tones are counted as well as all that lie between. Seconds are always represented upon adjacent degrees of the staff. But the representation is determined by nature of the interval and not the interval by the form of the representation.

A minor second is equal to one half-step; a major second to two half-steps; an augmented second to three half-steps, being equal to a minor third, from which, however, it easily distinguishes itself by the manner in which it is used.

Seconda (sā-kōn'dä), It. Second, a second.

Sibilus (sĭb'ĭ-loos), Lat. A little flute, or flageolet, used to teach birds to sing.

Siciliana (sē-tshē-lĭ-ä'nä), It. / Siciliano (sē-tshē-lĭ-ä'nō), It. } A dance of the Sicilian peasants, a graceful movement of a slow, soothing, pastoral character, in 6-8 or 12-8 time.

Side drum. The common military drum, so called from its hanging at the side of the drummer when played upon. Called also snare drum, from two strings of catgut called snares, stretched across the lower head in order to check reverberation. This instrument, whose military use is very old, dates as orchestral instrument only from the time of Rossini, who first introduced it in the overture to "La Gazza Laddra."

Si diese (sē dĭ-āz), Fr. The note B♯.

Sieben (sē'b'n), Ger. Seven.

Siebenklang (sē'b'n-klăng'), Ger. Heptachord, a scale of seven notes.

Siebente (sē'bĕn-tē), Ger. Seventh.

Siebenzehnte (sē' b'n-tsĕn-tē), Ger. Seventeenth.

Siegesgesang (sē'ghĕs-ghĕ-säng'), / Siegeslied (sē'ghĕs-lēd'), } Ger. A triumphal song.

Siegesmarsch (sē'ghĕs-märsh'), Ger. A triumphal march.

Siffflöte (sĭff'flŏ'tē), Ger. An organ-stop of 2- or 1-foot scale, of the Hohlflute species.

Siffler (sĭf-flā), Fr. To make a hissing noise.

Sifflet (sĭf-flā), Fr. A catcall, a squeaking instrument used in playhouses to condemn a performance.

Signalhorn (sĭg-näl'horn), Ger. A bugle.

Signatur (sĭg'nä-toor'), Ger. / Signature. } Name given to the sharps or flats placed at the beginning of a piece, and at the commencement of each staff, to indicate the key in which it is written. The signature adjusts the staff to the demands of the key in which the piece is written, except in the case of the minor mode, which is always written with the signature of the relative major, and a regular accidental, a sign of the elevation (a sharp or natural), upon the seventh degree. The sharps or flats of the signature affect not only the lines and spaces upon which they are placed, but all octaves above or below upon the same staff.

Signature, time. Figures, in the form of a fraction, placed at the beginning of a piece to indicate the time. The upper of the two figures tells the number of pulses in a measure, and the lower the kind of note which represents one pulse, and accordingly is taken for the time unit of the piece, all other notes being valued in relation to it.

Signe (sēn), Fr. The sign 𝄋. See Segno.

Signes accidentels (sēn ăk-sĭ-dänh't'l), Fr. Accidental sharps, flats, or naturals.

Signes de silences (sēn dĕ sĭ-länhs'), Fr. Rests.

Signs of abbreviation. Strokes, waving lines, dots, and figures, employed to denote a repetition of notes, continuation of rests, etc.

Siguidilla (sē-gwē-dēl'yä), Sp. See Seguidilla.

Silence (sē-länhs), Fr. / Silenzio (sē-lēn'tsĭ-ō), It. } A rest.

Si leva il sordino (sē lā'vä ēl sōr-dē'nō), It. Take off the mute.

Si levano i sordino (sē lē-vä'nō ē sōr-dē'nō), It. Raise the dampers.

Silver trumpet. The chatsoteroth of the ancient Hebrews, straight, a cubit long, with a bell-shaped mouth.

Si maggiore (sē mäd-jōr'ĕ), It. B major.

Si majeur (sē mä-zhŭr), Fr. The key of B major.

Simile (sē'mĭ-lĕ), It. Similarly; in like manner.

Si mineur (sē mĭ-nŭr'), Fr. The key of B minor.

Si minore (sē mĭ-nō'rĕ), It. B minor.

Simplified. Rendered free from difficult passages.

Sin', It. As far as. See Sino.

Sin' al fine (sēn äl fē'nĕ), It. To the end, as far as the end.

Sin' al segno (sĭn äl sän'yō), It. As far as the sign.

Si naturrel (sē nät-oo-rĕl), Fr. B.

Sincopa (sĭn'kō-pä), It. / Sincope (sĭn'kō-pē), } See Syncopato.

Sinfonia (sĭn-fō'nĭ-ä), It. / Sinfonie (sänh-fō-nē'), Fr. } An orchestral composition in many parts; a symphony.

Sinfonia a pittorica (sĭn-fō-nē'ä ä pēt-tō'rĭ-kä), It. A symphony descriptive of scenes and events.

Sinfonia concertante (sĭn-fō-nē'ä kŏn-tshĕr-tän'tē),
Sinfonia concertata (sĭn-fō-nē'ä kŏn-tshĕr-tä'tä),
Sinfonia concertate (sĭn-fō-nē'ä kŏn-tsher-tä'tē), It.
A concerto for many instruments; a concerto symphony.

Sinfonia da camera (sĭn-fō-nē'ä dä kä'mĕ-rä), It. Symphonies composed for chamber use, as quartets, trios, etc.

Sinfonia eroica (sĭn-fō-nē'ä ā-rō'ĭ-kä), It. A symphony in the heroic style.

Sinfonie (sĭn'fō-nē'), Ger. A symphony.

Sing. To perform melody with the voice. The singing voice differs primarily from the speaking voice in two particulars. First, the intonation is at a determinate pitch, and the voice is carried directly from one intonation to another without any break in the continuity of tone except where the idea breaks. Second, the tone quality is of better grade and finer resonance. The act of singing implies an emotional excitation to which speaking would not be adequate. In all very emotional speech the tone assumes certain qualities of singing.

Singakademie (sĭng'ä-kä-dĕ-mē'), Ger. Vocal academy.

Singanstalt (sĭng'än-stält'), Ger. Singing club.

Singart (sĭng-ärt), Ger. Manner, or style, of singing.

Sino (sē'nō), It.
Sin' (sēn), } To, as far as, until; con fuoco sin' al fine, with spirit to the end.

Sino al fine pianissimo (sē'nō äl fē'nĕ pē-ä-nĭs'sĭ-mō), It. Pianissimo to the end.

Sino al segno (sē'nō äl sän'yō), It. As far as the sign.

Si piace (sē pē-ä-tshĕ), It. At pleasure, as you please.

Si raddoppia il tempo (sē räd-dōp'pĭ-ä ēl tĕm'-pō), It. Redouble the time; as fast again.

Siren. In ancient mythology a goddess who enticed men into her power by the charms of music and devoured them.

Sirene. An instrument used for ascertaining the velocity of aerial vibration, corresponding to the different pitches of musical sounds.

Siren song. A song of a bewitching, fascinating style.

Sirenengesang (sē-rĕn'ĕn-ghĕ-säng'), Ger. Siren-song; a soft, luscious, seductive melody.

Si replica (sē rā'plĭ-kä), It. A repeat; to be repeated.

Si replica una volta (sē rā'plĭ-kä oo'nä vōl'tä), It. Play the part over again.

Si scriva (sē scrē'vä), It. As written, without any alterations or embellishments.

Si segue (sē sā'gwĕ), It. Go on.

Sistrum (sĭs'troom), Lat. An instrument of percussion of very great antiquity, supposed to have been invented by the Egyptians, and was much used by the priests of Iris and Osiris in sacrifice. It consisted of a rod of iron, bent into an oval or oblong shape, or square at two corners and curved at the others, and furnished with a number of movable rings, so that, when shaken, or struck with another rod of iron, it emitted the sound desired. It answered the same purpose as the bell in the Mass.

Si tace (sē tä'tshĕ), It. Be silent.

Six-eighth measure. A measure having the value of six eighth-notes, marked 6-8.

Sixes and fives metre. A metre consisting of a stanza of eight lines in iambic or trochaic measure, designated thus, 6s & 5s.

Sixes and four. A metre designated thus, 6s & 4, consisting of a stanza of four lines in iambic measure.

Sixes and tens. A metre designated thus, 6s & 10s, consisting of a stanza of six lines in iambic measure.

Sixes metre. A metre designated thus, 6s, consisting of a stanza of eight lines of six syllables each, in iambic measure.

Sixes and sevens and eights metre. A metre designated thus, 6s, 7s, & 8s, consisting of a stanza of eight lines, in iambic measure.

Sixième (sēz-ĭ-ām′), Fr. A sixth.

Six pour quatre (sēz poor kätr), Fr. A double triplet, or sextuplet; six notes to be played in the time of four.

Sixte (sēkst), Fr. A sixth.

Sixteenth note. A semiquaver.

Sixteenth rest. A pause equal in duration to a sixteenth note.

Sixtes (sēkst), Fr. Sixths.

Sixth. The interval between any tone of the scale and the next but four above or below. A sixth is represented upon the staff by a line and a space with two lines between. There are three sixths in use: The minor, equal to eight half-steps, as between mi and do; the major, nine half-steps, as between sol and me; and the augmented, of ten half-steps, as between fa and re-sharp. The major and minor sixths are classed as imperfect consonances.

Sixth-chord. The first inversion of the triad.

Sixty-fourth note. A hemidemisemiquaver.

Sixty-fourth rest. A pause equal in point of duration to a sixty-fourth note.

Skalde (skäl′dĕ), Ger. A scald; ancient Scandinavian bard.

Skip. A term applied to any transition exceeding that of a whole step.

Skizzen (skĭts′sĕn), Ger. pl. Sketches; short pieces.

Slargando (slär-gän′dō), It. } Extending,
Slargandosi (slär-gän-dō′zĭ), It. } enlarging, widening; the time to become gradually slower.

Slentando (slĕn-tän′dō), It. Relaxing the time, becoming gradually slower.

Slide. (1) The movable part of the trombone and slide trumpet, by which the length of the tube can be increased. A slide consists of a tube in the shape of a U, with prolonged shanks wide enough to admit of the insertion of two shanks of the remaining part of the instrument. What on the horn and the ordinary trumpet is affected by crooks and valves can be easily and more perfectly accomplished on the trombone and slide trumpet by the slide. In the case of the B♭ trombone, for instance, the player can change the key of the instrument by drawing the slide more and more out into A, A♭, G, G♭, F, and E. (2) An ornament consisting of two or more quick notes proceeding diatonically to the principal note. (3) A sliding strip of lath, which in the organ cuts off a rank of pipes from their wind.

Slide, tuning. An English instrument producing thirteen semitones and used for pitching the keynote.

Slogan. The war-cry, or gathering-word, of a Highland clan in Scotland.

Slur. A curved line over two or more notes, to show that they must be played smoothly.

Small octave. The name given in Germany to the notes included between C on the second space of the bass staff and the B above, these notes being expressed by small letters, as a, b, c, d, etc.

Solmizare (sōl-mĭ-tsä'rĕ), It. } scales, applying to the different tones their respective syllables, do, re, mi, fa, sol, la, si. To this kind of vocal exercise the practice of solfeggi is added.

Solmization (sōl-mĭ-zā'shŭn), Eng. The art of singing by solfa, i. e., by use of the scale syllables. In Italy, France, and Germany, the scale-names do, re, mi, fa, sol, la, si, do are applied to C, D, E, etc., according to the scale of C, no matter what the key may be. In this usage the solfa amounts merely to an arbitrary set of words for preparatory stages of vocal training. But according to the system practiced in America and by the tonic solfaists in England the syllables are applied to the degrees of the scale, do to one, re to two, etc., through the keys. In this usage the syllables become associated with certain relations of tone in key, and are a help to identifying key-relations. They are therefore peculiarly advantageous in the earlier stages of study. There comes a time, however, when the introduction of modulations and arbitrary dissonances renders the solfa rather complicated, and the best musicians are not yet agreed whether, on the whole, some other system might be invented which would afford the help without the disadvantages mentioned.

Son (sŏnh), Fr } Sound.
Son (sōn), Sp. }

Son aigu (sŏnh ā-gü), Fr. A sharp, acute sound.

Sonante (sō-nän'tĕ), Sp. Sounding, sonorous.

Sonare (sō-nä'rĕ), It. To sound, to have a sound, to ring, to play upon.

Sonare alla mente (sō-nä'rĕ äl'lä mĕn'tĕ), It. Formed according to the mind; to play extempore, to improvise.

Sonata (sō-nä'tä), It. Something sounded. Hence an instrumental composition. This appears to have been the original meaning of the word. Sonata Form designates what is sometimes called the Principal Form in music, or the ideal form toward which all compositions tend which are neither purely lyric, fugal, nor dance.

The sonata affords one of the most instructive illustrations of development to be found in music. Originally it was derived from dance forms, each movement being a serious enlargement of some popular rhythm, but carried out thematically and contrapuntally, i. e., without lyric episodes. Bach's sonatas for organ, and for violin solos, consist of from three to five movements of this kind, duly contrasted among themselves. The trio organ sonatas are extended in form and beautifully written. All they lack for modern hearing is occasional points of lyric episode. The innovation made by Haydn consisted of adding these points of lyric repose, both as episodes in the allegro movements and as foundation for the slow movements. Mozart added to Haydn's work a still more distinct return to the folksong as the type of the lyrical moments in a sonata. As practiced by these great masters the sonata consisted of three movements or four. First, an allegro, following a certain type of treatment (of which presently); then a slow movement, generally an andante cantabile or an adagio; then a rondo or finale. Beethoven made several innovations upon this order, first by inserting a third movement between the slow movement and the finale. This is a menuet or a scherzo with trio. His further innovations consisted in intensifying the lyric movements and moments, and in making them still more deep and heartfelt.

The sonata-piece (Sonatasatz) is the principal movement in a sonata. The entire sonata-piece divides into three chapters: First, from the beginning to the double bar.

This contains all the original material of the entire movement. There is, first, a principal, or leading, subject, which generally is thematic in character, closes in the dominant, and leads off toward the second by means of passage or modulating periods, derived in part from the material of the principal. Then comes the second, in the dominant of the original key, or in the relative major, if that had been minor. The second is also called by the Germans Gesanggruppe, "song-group," in token of its lyric character. After some sixteen or thirty-two measures of this, passage work may or may not intervene, leading to the partial close, which brings around to a cadence upon the dominant of the original key at the double bar, where is always marked a repeat for the entire work up to this part. In some instances, as in Beethoven's Sonata Appassionata, the modulating material after the principal is so much enlarged and so interesting as to become almost an equal factor with the principal, the second, and the close in affording material for the later development. The second chapter of the sonata-piece follows the double bar, and consists of an elaboration (German Durchführungssatz, "working-out piece") a free fantasia upon motives already introduced. This, after suitable development, leads into a pedal point upon the dominant of the principal key, leading to the third chapter of the sonata-piece, the repetition, or reprise, in which all the matter of the first chapter comes again, with little modification, except that the principal is sometimes slightly abridged, and the second is now in the principal key of the work, leading to the close in that key.

The sonata-piece is the type of most overtures (all which are not potpourris), and is at the foundation of all works in sonata form, such as sonatas, chamber duos, trios, quartets, etc., concertos and symphonies. Its great advantage for the composer is its liberality of opportunity in thematic and lyric directions combined, thus permitting a composer to give his fancy loose rein, and make new works, at once interesting and beautiful, in whatever style may happen to please him.

The slow movements of sonatas are often largely upon the same lines, except that, owing to the greater time occupied by a slow movement, the forms have to be shorter, and the elaborations are greatly abridged. This is in consequence of the limitation to the persistence of musical impressions. An elaboration becomes intelligible to a hearer only when he remembers the musical material in its unelaborated form, and this will be only a certain very short interval after he has heard it. Moreover, there is better effect in a slow movement in developing a lyric theme, as we find in many symphonies by Beethoven, Brahms, and the other great writers.

The third movement in a sonata of four movements is generally a song form with trio. This is the lightest division of the work. The last movement is either a rondo or a finale. The latter is a sonata-piece, if taken as leading movement. The rondo comes from a different source, and is lighter. See Rondo. In several instances Beethoven introduced other kinds of movement in his so-called sonatas. An air and variations are met with as first movement, or as second, and in one instance, two instances, at least, as last movement.

In the Sonata, Opus 110, the last movement is a fugue. Hence the proper definition of a sonata will be a composition in which one or more movements are in the form of a sonata-piece.

Sonata da camera (sō-nä'tä dä kä'mĕ-rä), It. A sonata designed for the chamber or parlor.

Sonata di bravura (sō-nä'tä dē brä-voo'rä), It. A brave, bold style of sonata.

Sonata di chiesa (sō-nä'tä dē kē-ä'zä), It. A church sonata, an organ sonata.

Sonata, grand. A massive and extended sonata, consisting usually of four movements.

Sonate (sō-nä'tĕ), Ger. A sonata.

Sonatine (sō-nä-tēn), Fr. } sonata.

Son doux (sŏnh doo), Fr. Soft sound.

Sonetto (sō-nĕt'tō), It. A sonnet.

Sonevole (sō-nā'vō-lĕ), It. Sonorous, ringing, sounding.

Song. That which is sung. A melody; a poem set to music for a single voice, or for several voices (partsong). Songs are distinguished as strophic, in which the same music answers to all the stanzas of the text, and "through-composed," in which each stanza has its own music. Also songs are distinguished as folksongs, which are simple melodies of unpretending musical quality, and art songs, in which the music seeks solely to interpret the text, hampered only by the practicability for the voice and the proper limits of an accompaniment. Of the latter kind Schubert and Schumann wrote some beautiful examples, which stand as models.

Song, bacchanalian. A song which either in sentiment or style relates to scenes of revelry.

Song, boat. A song sung by the rowers; gondolier-song.

Song, erotic. A love-song.

Songform. In the form of a song. A musical form consisting of one, two, three, or at most five, periods making a unity. The principal subjects of all the Beethoven Andante Cantabiles are practically songforms. So are menuets, scherzi, and the individual ideas of most dances.

A second form is often added in a related key. This is called a trio, and is merely an independent and contrasting songform. After this a return is made to the first songform. Of long examples of songform Schumann left the best in the first movements of his Novelettes, in E, Opus 21, No. 7, and in B minor, Opus 99.

The periods in a songform are lyrical in rhythm, if not in essential nature.

Songs without words. Pianoforte pieces of a poetical character, consisting of a melody with an accompaniment.

Sonnet. A short poem of fourteen lines, two stanzas of four verses each, and two of three each, the rhymes being adjusted by a particular rule.

Soprano concertina. A concertina having the compass of a violin.

Soprano mezzo (sō-prä'nō mĕz'zō), It. A species of female voice between soprano and alto.

Soprano naturel (sō-prä'-nō nä-too-rāl), It. A natural soprano. A falsetto.

Soprano, second. Low soprano.

Soprano secundo od alto (sō-prä'nō sä-koon'dō ōd äl'tō), It. The second soprano or alto.

Sopranstimme (sō-prän'stĭm'mĕ), Ger. A soprano voice.

Sopra quinta (sō'prä quĭn'tä), It. Upper dominant.

Sopra una corda (sō'prä oo'nä kōr'dä), It. On one string.

Sorda (sōr'dä), It. Muffled, veiled tone.

Sordamente (sōr-dä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Softly, gently; also damped, muffled.

Sordine. A small instrument, or damper, in the mouth of a trumpet, or on the bridge of a violin or violoncello, to make the sound more faint and subdued. A mute.

Sordini (sōr-dē'nĭ), It. pl. Mutes in violin-playing and the dampers in pianoforte music. See Con sordini and Senza sordini.

Sordini levati (sōr-dē'nĭ lĕ-vä'tĕ), It. The dampers removed.

Sordino (sōr-dē'nō), It. A sordine. A mute.

Sorgfältig (sōrg'fāl-tĭgh), Ger. Carefully.

Sorgfältig gebunden (sōrg'fāl-tĭgh gĕ-boon'dᵊn), Ger. Very smoothly.

Sortita (sōr-tē'tä), It. The opening air in an operatic part; the entrance aria.

Sospensione (sōs-pĕn-sĭ-ō'nĕ), It. A suspension.

Sospirando (sōs-pĭ-rän'dō),
Sospirante (sōs-pĭ-rän'tĕ),
Sospirevole (sōs-pĭ-rā'vō-lĕ), It.
Sospiroso (sōs-pĭ-rō'zō),
} Sighing, very subdued, doleful.

Sospiro (sōs-pē'rō), It. A crotchet rest.

Sostenendo (sōs-tĕ-nĕn'dō), It. } Sustaining
Sostenuto (sōs-tĕ-noo'tō), It. } the tone, keeping the notes down their full duration.

Sostenuto molto (sōs-tĕ-noo'tō mōl'tō), It. In a highly sustained manner.

Sotto (sōt'tō), It. Under, below.

Sotto voce (sōt-tō vō'tshĕ), It. Softly, in a low voice, in an undertone.

Soubrette (soo-brĕtt'), Fr. A female singer for a subordinate part in a comic opera.

Soufflerie (soof-flĕ-re), Fr. The machinery belonging to the bellows in an organ.

Sound. The impression made upon sense-perception by vibrations of the air, originating in the air itself, or communicated to it by any sounding body. The pitch of the sound depends upon the frequency of the vibrations, which are inaudible when they fall below the rate of from 8 to 32 per second, or when they rise above the rate of about 40,000 per second. The intensity of the sound depends upon the amplitude of the vibration—the impression of intensity being, perhaps, referred back to a theory that greater force is behind the ample vibration.

Sounds differ in respect to consistency within themselves. Some, as, for instance, a blow upon a block of wood, are dull and confused; so, also, a blow upon an iron kettle, or a wooden box. In these cases several rates of vibration are in operation at the same time. Again, when a stretched string vibrates and makes a tone, there are also several rates of vibration in operation at the same time, the string vibrating not only in its full length but also in various aliquot parts, whereby the sounds of several different pitches are produced. In the case of the string all these rates are multiples of the rate of the full string, and the resulting partial tones mutually combine and coalesce, so that the individual elements composing them can not be made out by ordinary ears. Hence what is called a musical tone, the essential element of which is consistency within itself, so that the vibrations combine into a harmonious and complete whole. The opposite of tone is noise, which is simply a sound so inconsistent and contradictory in the conflicting rates of vibration composing it that it affords the ear no repose whatever, and therefore it has no musical character. Noises are of limited application in music, the kettledrums, triangles, cymbals, and bass drum being practically less offensive noises. They are employed for the sake of rendering the ensemble more imposing, and their empty character, from a musical standpoint, is glossed over by an imposing amplitude of brilliant tone from the brass and other telling qualities.

The timbre, or color, of tone depends upon the selection and relative importance of the partial tones present in the klang, or tone. This subject is fully investigated in Helmholtz's great work on "Sensations of Tone," ("Tonempfindung.") The difference between the color of tones derived from the violin, flute, cornet, or other instruments, depends wholly upon the nature and relative importance of partial tones composing them. These again are influenced by the nature of the sounding material, brass lending itself to the production of high upper partials, in which the flute is comparatively poor. Of all forms of tone that derived from strings reinforced by wooden sounding-boards is the most satisfactory, excepting the tones of the human voice, which admit of assuming almost any kind of timbre.

All stringed instruments are susceptible to considerable tonal variety, according to the skill with which the vibration is incited. In those of the violin family this is done by skillfully handling the bow. The tone of the harp is very much modified by the manner in which the finger plucks the string; and even in the pianoforte, where mechanism would seem to have been most exact, the tone is largely influenced by the manner in which the keys are attacked. The use of the pedal also influences the quality of the piano tone, the finer shades being impossible without the help of the pedal.

Soundboard. } The thin board over which Sounding-board. } the strings of the pianoforte and similar instruments are distended. The vibrating table of any wooden instrument.

Soundholes. The f holes in the belly of instruments of the violin family; the round hole in the belly of the guitar, etc. They are designed to afford more perfect communication with the outer air.

Soundpost. A small post, or prop, within a violin, nearly under the bridge.

Sound-register. An apparatus invented in Paris in 1858, by means of which sounds are made to record themselves, whether those of musical instruments or of the voice in singing or speaking.

Soupir (soo-per), Fr. A crotchet rest.

Sourdeline (soor'dĭ-len), Fr. An Italian bag pipe, or musette.

Sourdement (soord'mänh), Fr. In a subdued manner.

Sourdine (soor-den), Fr. The name of a harmonium-stop. See, also, Sordino.

Sous (soo), Fr. Under, below.

Sous-chantre (soo shänhtr'), Fr. A subchanter.

Sous-dominante (soo dō-mĭ-nänht'), Fr. The subdominant, or fourth of the scale.

Sous-médiante (soo mā-dĭ-änht), Fr. The submediant, or sixth of the scale.

Sous-tonique (soo tōn-ēk'), Fr. The seventh of the scale, or subtonic.

Soutenir (soo-tĕ-ner'), Fr. To sustain a sound.

Souvenir (soo-vĕ-ner'), Fr. Recollection, reminiscence.

Spaces. The intervals between the lines of the staff.

Spagnoletta (spän-yō-lĕt'tä), It. A Spanish dance, a species of minuet.

Spagnuola (spän-yoo-ō'lä), It. The guitar.

Spalla (späl'lä), It. Shoulder. See Viola da spalla.

Spanisch (spän-ĭsh), Ger. } In the Span-
Spagnolesco (spän-yō-lĕs'kō), It. } ish style.

Spassapensiere (späs-sä-pĕn-sĭ-ā'rĕ), It. The jew's-harp.

Spasshaft (späss'häft), Ger. Sportively, playfully, merrily.

Spasshaftigkeit (späss'häf-tĭg-kīt), Ger. Sportiveness, playfulness.

Spatium spā-shĭ-oom), Lat. } A space between Spazio spā'tsĭ-ō), It. } the lines where music is written; a distance, an interval.

Spianato (spe-ä-nä'tō), It. Smooth, even; legato.

Spiccato (spĕk-kä'tō), It. Separated, pointed, distinct, detached; in violin music it means that the notes are to be played with the point of the bow.

Spiel (spēl), Ger. Play, performance.

Spielart (spēl'ärt), Ger. Manner of playing, style of performance.

Spielen (spē'l'n), Ger. To play on an instrument.

Spieler (spē'lĕr), Ger. Performer.

Spielmanieren (spēl'mä-nē'r'n), Ger. Playmanners. Instrumental ornaments, graces.

Spinet (spĭn'ĕt), Eng. } A stringed instru-
Spinett (spĭ-nĕt'), Ger. } ment, formerly much
Spinetta (spĭ-nĕt'tä), It. } in use, somewhat similar to the harpsichord, and, like that, consisting of a case, sounding-board, keys, jacks, and a bridge. It was evidently derived from the harp, and was originally called the couched harp, though since denominated spinet, from its quills, which resemble thorns, called in Latin spinæ. The spinet was a small harpsichord, in square form, whereas the larger instrument had the shape of a grand piano.

Spirito (spē'rĭ-tō), It. Spirit, life, energy.

Spiritosamente spē-rĭ-tō-zä-mĕn'tĕ), } It.
Spiritoso (spē-rĭ-tō'zo), }
Lively, animated, brisk, spirited.

Spirituale (spē-rĭ-too-ä'lĕ), It. } Sacred, spir-
Spirituel (spĭr-ē-too-ĕl'), Fr. } itual.

Spirituoso (spē-rĭ-too-ō'zō), It. See Spiritoso.

Spissi gravissimi (spĭs'sĭ grä-vĭs'sĭ-mĭ), Lat. Hypatoides—the deep, or bass, sounds of the ancient Greek system.

Spissus (spĭs-soos), Lat. Thick; full, referring to intervals.

Spitz (spĭ'z), Ger. Point.

Spitzflöte (spĭtz-flö'tĕ), Ger. } Pointed flute;
Spitzflute (spitz-floo'tĕ), } an organ-stop of a soft, pleasing tone, the pipes of which are conical and pointed at the top.

Spitzharfe (spĭtz'här-fĕ), Ger. Pointed harp. A small harp with two sounding-boards and two rows of strings.

Spitzquinte (spĭtz-kwĭn'tĕ), Ger. An organ-stop with pointed pipes, sounding a fifth above the foundation stops.

Spondee (spŏn-dē), Lat. A musical foot consisting of two long notes or syllables.——

Sprung (sproong), Ger. A skip.

Square B. Name formerly given to B-natural on account of its shape.

Square piano. A piano made in square form, the strings and sounding-board lying horizontally, and the keyboard upon one of the long sides of the instrument. Now nearly obsolete, on account of lack of room for the three stringed unisons which nearly all modern pianos contain, and also because in square pianos each action has to be fitted to the instrument to which it belongs, whereas in uprights the parts are interchangeable.

Sta (stä), It. This, as it stands; to be played as written.

Stabat mater (stä'bät mä'tĕr), Lat. The Mother stood—a hymn on the crucifixion.

Stabile (stä'bĭ-lĕ), It. Firm.

Stac. An abbreviation of Staccato.

Staccare (stäk-kä'rĕ), It. To detach, to separate each note.

Staccatissimo (stäk-kä-tĭs'sĭ-mō), It. Very much detached; as staccato as possible.

Staccato (stäk-kä'tō), It. Detached, distinct, separated from each other.

Staccato delicatamente (stäk-kä'tō dĕl-ĭ-kä-tä-mĕn'tĕ), It. In staccato style, lightly and delicately.

Staccato marks. Small dots or dashes placed over or under the notes, thus:

No difference is now made in playing the dotted staccato signs and the pointed ones. Formerly it was taught that the dots represented a half staccato.

Staccato touch. A sudden lifting up of the fingers from the keys, giving to the music a light, detached, airy effect. A staccato touch is one which has an attack, but is not followed by a clinging pressure for maintaining the tone. In general staccato tones are made very short, but occasionally the pedal is used in such a way that the tone has a resonance slightly longer than the repose of the finger upon the key. Upon the violin an ordinary staccato is played with the bow, the resulting tones being, therefore, merely somewhat separated from each other, but of the same quality. The extreme staccato is made pizzicato, as it is called, by plucking the strings with the fingers, whereby the tone is extremely short and of limited sonority.

Stadtmusikus (städt'moo'sĭ-koos), } Ger.
Stadtpfeifer (städt'pfī'fĕr), }
Town musician.

Staff. The five horizontal and parallel lines on and between which the notes are written. The lines and spaces are named as follows:

——First added line above.
Space above.
Fifth line
Fourth space.
Fourth line
Third space.
Third line
Second space.

Staff, bass. The staff marked with the bass cleff.

Staff, tenor. The staff marked with the tenor clef.

Staff, treble. The staff marked with the treble clef.

Stagione (stä-jĭ-ō'nĕ), It. The season, the musical season.

Stammaccord (stäm'äk-kōrd), Ger. A radical or fundamental chord, from which others are derived.

Stampita (stäm-pē'tä), It. An air, a tune, a song.

Ständchen (ständ'khĕn), Ger. A serenade.

Standhaftigkeit (ständ'häf-tĭg-kīt'), Ger. Firmness, resolution.

Stand, music. A light frame designed for holding sheets or books, for the convenience of performers.

Stanghetta (stän-gĕt'tä), It. A bar-line. The fine line drawn across, and perpendicular to, the staff.

Stanza (stän'tsa), It. A verse of a song or hymn.

Stark (stärk), Ger. Strong, loud, vigorous.

Starke Stimmen (stär'kĕ stĭm-mĕn), Ger. Loud stops; mit starken Stimmen, with loud stops.

Stave. Name formerly given to the staff.

Steg (stägh), Ger. The bridge of a violin, etc.

Stem. The thin stroke which is drawn from the head of a note.

Stem, double. A stem drawn both upward and downward from a note, indicating that the note belongs to two parts, in one of which it has its natural and appropriate length, as shown by its face, while in the other it may be shorter, corresponding to the notes that follow it.

Stentando (stĕn-tän'dō), It. Delaying, retarding.

Stentato (stĕn-tä'tō), It. Hard, forced, loud.

Stentorian. Extremely loud.

Stentorophonic tube. A speaking trumpet, so called from Stentor. The stentorophonic horn of Alexander the Great is famous; it was so powerful that he could give orders at a distance of one hundred stadia, which is about twenty English miles, so they say.

Step. The larger diatonic interval between two consecutive tones of the major scale. A step is equal to two half-steps.

Step, half. The smallest interval in the tempered scale, eleven of them making an octave. The interval from any piano-key to the next. Half-steps are sometimes, irrationally, called semitones.

Sterbend (stär'bĕnd), Ger. Dying away, the same as morendo.

Steso (stā'zō), It. Extended, diffused, large.

Stesso (stĕs'sō), It. The same; l'istésso témpo, in the same time.

Sticcado (stĭk-kä'dō), It. } An instrument
Sticcato (stĭk-kä'tō), } consisting of little bars of wood rounded at the top and resting on the edges of a kind of open box. They gradually increase in length and thickness, are tuned to the notes of the diatonic scale, and are struck with a little ball at the end of a stick.

Sticker. A portion of the connection, in an organ, between the keys or pedals and the valve; a short link attached to a key or pedal, and acting on the backfall.

Stile (stē'lĕ), It. Style.

Stile a cappella (stē'lĕ ä käp-pĕl'lä), It. In the chapel style.

Stile grandioso (stē'lĕ grän-dĭ-ō'zō), It. In a grand style of composition, or performance.

Stile rigoroso (stē'lĕ rĭ-gō-rō'zō), It. In a rigid, strict style.

Still (stĭll), Ger. Calmly, quietly.

Stillgedakt (stĭll-gĕ-däkt'), Ger. A stopped diapason, of a quiet tone.

Stilo (stē'lō), It. Style, manner of composition or performance.

Stilo alla cappella (stē'lō äl'lä kä-pĕl'lä), It. In the church or chapel style.

Stilo di recitativo (stē'lō dē rā-tshĕ-tä-tē'vō), It. In style of recitative.

Stimme (stĭm'mĕ), Ger. The voice, sound; also the soundpost in a violin, etc.; also a part in vocal or instrumental music; also an organ-stop or register.

Stimmen (stĭm'm'n), Ger. pl. Parts or voices; also organ-stops.

Stimmführung (stĭm'füh-roong), Ger. Voice movement.

Stimmgabel (stĭm'gä'b'l), Ger. Tuning-fork.

Stimmhammer (stĭm'häm'mĕr), Ger. Tuning-key, tuning-hammer.

Stimmhorn (stĭm'hörn), Ger. Tuning-cone for metal organ-pipes.

Stimmstock (stĭm'stŏk), Ger. The soundpost of a violin, etc.

Stimmumfang (stĭm'oom-fäng), Ger. Compass of a voice.

Stimmung (stĭm'moong), Ger. Tuning, tune, tone.

Stimmweite (stĭm'wī-tĕ), Ger. Voice-breadth, compass.

Stinguendo (stĭn-guĕn'dō), It. Dying away, becoming extinct.

Stiracchiato (stē-räk-kĭ-ä'tō), It. } Stretched,
Stirato (stē-rä'tō), } forced, retarded. See Allargando.

Stonante (stō-nän'tĕ), It. Discordant, out of tune.

Stop. A register, or row of pipes, in an organ; on the violin, etc., it means the pressure of the finger upon the string.

Stop, bassoon. A reed stop in an organ, resembling the bassoon in quality of tone.

Stop, claribel. A stop similar to the clarinet stop.

Stop, clarion, or Octave trumpet. A stop resembling the tone of a trumpet, but an octave higher than the trumpet stop.

Stop, cornet. A stop consisting of five pipes to each note.

Stop, cremona. A reed stop in unison with the diapasons.

Stop, double diapason. An open set of pipes tuned an octave below the diapasons.

Stop, double trumpet. The most powerful reed stop in the organ, the pipes being of the same length as the double diapason, to which it is tuned in unison.

Stop, dulciana A stop of peculiar sweetness of tone, which it chiefly derives from the bodies of its pipes being longer and smaller than those of the pipes of other stops.

Stop, faggotto. The bassoon stop.

Stop, fifteenth. A stop which derives its name from its pitch, or scale, being fifteen notes above that of the diapason.

Stop, flute. An organ-stop, resembling in tone a flute or flageolet.

Stop, hautboy. A reed stop having a tone in imitation of the hautboy.

Stop, larigot, or Octave twelfth. A stop the scale of which is an octave above the twelfth. It is only used in the full organ.

Stop, mixture, or furniture. A stop comprising two or more ranks of pipes shriller than those of the sesquialtera, and only calculated to be used together with that and other pipes.

Stop, nazard. Twelfth stop.

Stop, open diapason. A metallic stop which commands the whole scale of the organ, and which is called open, in contradistinction to the stop diapason, the pipes of which are closed at the top.

Stop, organ. A collection of pipes, similar in tone and quality, running through the whole, or a great part, of the compass of the organ; a register.

Stopped. Closed with a stopper. Applied to certain organ-pipes.

Stop, principal. A metallic stop, originally distinguished by that name, because holding, in point of pitch, the middle station between the diapason and the fifteenth, it forms the standard for tuning the other stops. In German organs the principal is the open diapason.

Stop, salicional. A string stop.

Stops, compound. An assemblage of several pipes in an organ, three, four, five, or more to each key, all answering at once to the touch of the performer.

Stops, draw. Stops in an organ placed on each side of the rows of keys in front of the instrument, by moving which the player opens or closes the stops within the organ.

Stop, sesquialtera. A stop resembling the mixture, running through the scale of the instrument, and consisting of three, four, and sometimes five ranks of pipes, tuned in thirds, fifths, and eighths.

Stops, foundation. The diapasons and principal, to which the other stops, be they few or many, are tuned, and which are absolutely required in an organ.

Stops, mutation. In an organ the twelfth, tierce, and their octaves.

Stop, solo. A stop intended for solo use.

Stops, Organ. A stop in an organ is properly a complete set of pipes of uniform tone-quality. There are four varieties of tone, called diapason, string, flute, and reed. The diapasons are metal pipes of large body and clear, solid sound, which in modern organs has rather more string-quality than formerly, because it is found that this quality blends better and pleases the ear. The diapason class includes the open diapasons, principal or octave, the fifteenth, and the mixtures. The pedal diapasons are sometimes made of wood, in order to save expense, but the tone is not so good. The string family of stops have metal pipes, preferably of tin or a large percentage of tin, small diameter, and frequently with a small hole at a certain distance, for promoting the formation of the overtones, upon which the cutting quality of the string tone depends. The names usually given them are Gamba, Keraulophon, Salicional.

The flute stops are of wood, like the stopped diapason, claribel, etc., or of metal voiced like wood, such as the flute harmonique, flauto traverso, etc. The reed stops are sounded by means of a striking or a free reed (which see), and are commonly named oboe, cornopeon, trumpet, vox angelica, voxhumana, etc.

Mixture stops are compound stops, producing octaves of the fundamental, and, generally, one fifth, voiced like a flute. A mixture having three elements is called a three-rank mixture. This is the usual number, but five ranks are not infrequent. The mixture stops are used only in full organ passages, and are intended to reinforce the upper partial tones, which it is not easy to secure from pipes in sufficient volume.

The variety of names of organ-stops is excessive, but necessitated by the number of stops in large modern organs, often reaching to more than one hundred. Hence the stops of any given family are shaded from each other by degrees which are almost imperceptible, except to an expert. However many the stops may be in number, there are only these four varieties of tone.

The name "stop" is sometimes applied to the draw-knobs, by which the stops are brought into connection with the keyboard, or cut off.

Stops, reed. Stops consisting of pipes, upon the end of which are fixed thin, narrow plates of brass, which, being vibrated by the wind from the bellows, produce a reedy brilliancy of tone.

Stop, stopped diapason. A stop the pipes of which are generally made of wood, and its bass, up to middle C, always of wood. They are only half as long as those of the open diapason, and are stopped at the upper end with wooden stoppers, or plugs, which render the tone more soft and mellow than that of the open diapason.

Stop, stopped unison. The stopped diapason stop.

Stop, tierce. A stop tuned a major third higher than the fifteenth, and only employed in the full organ.

Stop, treble forte. A stop applied to a melodeon, or reed organ, by means of which the treble part of the instrument may be increased in power, while the bass remains subdued.

Stop, tremolo. A contrivance by means of which a fine, tremulous effect is given to some of the registers of an organ.

Stop, trumpet. A stop so called because its tone is imitative of a trumpet. In large organs it generally extends through the whole compass.

Stop, twelfth. A metallic stop so denominated from its being tuned twelve notes above the diapason. This stop, on account of its pitch, or tuning, can never be used alone; the open diapason, stopped diapason, principal, and fifteenth, are the best qualified to accommodate it to the ear.

Stop, vox humana. A stop the tone of which resembles the human voice.

Storta (stōr'tä), It. A serpent. See that word.

Stortina (stōr-tē'nä), It. A small serpent.

Str. Abbreviation for Strings.

Straccinato (strä-tshĭ-nä'tō), It. See Strascinato.

Stradivari. The name of a very superior make of violin, so called from their makers, Stradivarius (father and son), who made them at Cremona, Italy, about A. D. 1650.

Strain. A portion of music divided off by a double bar.

Strascicando (strä-shĭ-kä̆n'dō), It. Dragging the time, trailing, playing slowly.

Strascinando (strä-shĭ-nän'dō), It. Dragging the time, playing slowly.

Strascinando l'arco (strä-shĭ-nän'dō lär-kō). Keeping the bow of the violin close to the strings, as in executing the tremolando, so as to slur or bind the notes closely.

Strascinato (strä-shĭ-nä'tō), It. Dragged along, played slowly.

Strascino (strä-shē'nō), It. A drag. This grace, or embellishment, is chiefly confined to vocal music, and only used in slow passages. It consists of an unequal and descending motion, and generally includes from eight to twelve notes, and requires to be introduced and executed with great taste and judgment.

Strathspey. A lively Scotch dance, in common time.

Stravagante (strä-vä-gän'tē), It. Extravagant, odd, fantastic.

Stravaganza (strä-vä-gän'tsä), It. Extravagance, eccentricity.

Street organ. Hand organ.

Streich (strīkh), Ger. String. Used in composition, as, Streichinstrumente, stringed instruments; Streichquartet, stringed quartet, etc.

Streng (strĕng), Ger. Strict, severe, rigid.

Strenge gebunden (strĕn'ghĕ ghĕ-boon'd'n), Ger. Strictly legato, exceedingly smooth.

Streng im Tempo (strĕng ĭm tĕm'pō), Ger. Strictly in time.

Strepito (strā'pĭ-tō), It. Noise.

Strepitosamente (strā-pĭ-tō-sä-mĕn'tĕ), It. With a great noise.

Strepitoso (strā-pĭ-tō'zō), It. Noisy, boisterous.

Stretta (strĕt'tä), It. A concluding passage, coda, or finale, in an opera, taken in quicker time to enhance the effect.

Stretto (strĕt'tō), It. Pressed, close, contracted; formerly used to denote that the movement indicated was to be performed in a quick, concise style. In fugue-writing that part where the subject and answer succeed one another very rapidly.

Strich (strīkh), Ger. Stroke, the manner of bowing.

Strichharten (strīkh är-t'n), Ger. Different ways of bowing.

Strict canon. A canon in which the imitation is complete, each voice exactly repeating the other.

Strict composition. A composition in which voices alone are employed; that which rigidly adheres to the rules of art.

Strict fugue. Where the fugal form and its laws are rigidly observed.

Strict inversion. The same as simple inversion, but requiring that whole tones should be answered by whole tones, and semitones by semitones.

Strictly inverted imitation. A form of imitation in which half and whole tones must be precisely answered in contrary motion.

Strict style. A style in which a rigid adherence to the rules of art is observed.

Strident (strē-dänh), Fr. } Sharp, shrill, acute.
Stridente (strē-dĕn'tĕ), It. }
Stridevole (strē-dĕ-vō'lĕ), It. }

Striking reed. That kind of reed pipe in an organ in which the tongue strikes against the tube in producing the tone.

String band. A band of stringed instruments only.

Stringed instruments. Instruments whose sounds are produced by striking or drawing strings, or by the friction of a bow drawn across them.

Stringendo (strēn-gĕn'dō), It. Pressing, accelerating the time.

String pendulum. A Weber chronometer.

String quartet. A composition for four instruments of the violin species, as two violins, a viola, and violoncello.

Strings. Wires, or chords, used in musical instruments, which, upon being struck or drawn upon, produce tones; the stringed instruments in a band or orchestra.

Strings, latten. Wires made of a composition consisting of copper and zinc.

Strings, open. The strings of an instrument when not pressed.

Strisciando (strē-shĭ-ăn'dō), It. Gliding, slurring, sliding smoothly from one note to another.

Strofa (strō'fä), Strofe (strō'fĕ), It. } A strophe, stanza.

Strohfiedel (strō'fē-d'l), Ger. Straw fiddles. A xylophone composed of rods of wood, which, when struck by a little mallet, give out musical sounds.

Stroke, diagonal. A transverse heavy stroke, having a dot each side of it, denoting that the previous measure or the previous group of notes in the same measure is to be repeated.

Stroke, double. Two strokes or dashes drawn over or under a semibreve or through the stem of a minim or crotchet, implying that such note must be divided into as many semiquavers as are equivalent to it in duration.

Stroke, single. A stroke or dash drawn over or under a semibreve, or through the stem of a minim or crotchet, implying that such a note must be divided into as many quavers as are equivalent to it in duration.

Stroke, transverse. A heavy stroke placed above a fundamental note to indicate the intervals of changing notes, and also used for anticipation in an upper part.

Stroke, triple. Three strokes or dashes placed over or under a semibreve, or through the stem of a minim or crotchet, implying that such note must be divided into as many demisemiquavers as are equivalent to it in duration.

Strombazzata (strŏm-bät-tsä'tä), Strombettata (strŏm-bĕt-tä'tä), It } The sound of a trumpet.

Strombettare (strŏm-bĕt-tä'rĕ), It. To sound or play on the trumpet.

Strombettiere (strŏm-bĕt-tĭ-ā'rĕ), It. A trumpeter.

Stromentato (strō-mĕn-tä'tō), It. Instrumented, scored for an orchestra.

Stromenti (strō-mĕn'tē), It. pl. Musical instruments.

Stromenti da fiato (strō-mĕn'tē dä fē-ä'tō), Stromenti di vento (strō-mĕn'tē dē vĕn'tō), It. pl. Wind instruments.

Stromenti d'arco (strō-mĕn'tē d'är'kō), It. pl. Instruments played with the bow.

Stromenti di rinforzo (strō-mĕn'tē dē rĭn-fôr'tsō), It. pl. Instruments employed to support or strengthen a performance.

Stromento (strō-mĕn'tō), It. An instrument.

Strophe. In the ancient theater, that part of a song or dance around the altar which was performed by turning from the right to the left. It was succeeded by the antistrophe, in a contrary direction. Hence, in ancient lyric poetry, the former of two stanzas was called the strophe, and the latter the antistrophe. The epode, or after song, followed after.

Stück (stük), Ger. Piece, air, tune, musical entertainment.

Stückchen (stük'khĕn), Ger. Little airs or tunes.

Studien (stoo'dĭ-ĕn), Ger. pl. Studies.

Studio (stoo'dī-ō), Studium (stoo'dī-oom), It. } A study, an exercise intended for the practice of some particular difficulty.

Stufe (stoo'fĕ), Ger. Step, degree.

Stufe der Tonleiter (stoo'fĕ dĕr tōn'lī-tĕr), Ger. A degree of the scale.

Stufen ((stoo'f'n), Ger. Steps or degrees.

Stufenweise (stoo'f'n-wī'sĕ), Ger. By degrees.

Stürmisch (stür'mĭsh), Ger. Impetuously, boisterously, furiously.

Stürze (stür'tse), Ger. The bell of wind instruments.

Style. That manner of composition or performance on which the effect chiefly, if not wholly, depends. The distinction "strict" and "free" style is often made. By strict style is meant a manner of composition in which a certain number of voice-parts are carried through in accordance with the principles of this form of composition, which substantially are that only triads and their first inversions are to be used, and that no dissonances are employed, except those proper to strict counterpoint. In free composition, or style, the number of voices may vary from strain to strain, and dissonances are freely introduced. Accompaniments must be obligato, etc.

Stylo (stē'lō), It. Style.

Stylo dramatico (stē'lō drä-mä'tĭ-kō), It. In dramatic style.

Stylo ecclesiastico (stē'lo ek-klā-zĭ-äs'tĭ-kō), It. In church style.

Stylo fantastico (stē'lō fän-täs'tĭ-kō), It. An easy, humorous style free from all restraint.

Stylo rappresentativo (stē'lō räp-prā-zĕn-tä-tē'vō), It. The name originally applied to music written for opera, meaning that the chief office of the music was to represent the poetry. At first this meant simply the spirit of the declamation; later the "representation" was enlarged to the point where music itself became elaborated in order to give fuller representation to the spirit of the poem and the dramatic situation, no less than of the words merely.

Stylo recitativo (stē'lō rā-tsĭ-tä-tē'vō), It. In the style of a recitative.

Su (soo), It. Above, upon.

Suabeflute. An organ-stop of pure liquid tone, not so loud as the Waldflute; it was invented by William Hill, of London.

Suave (soo-ä'vĕ), It. Suave (soo-ä'vĕ), Sp. Suave (swäv), Fr. } Sweet, mild, agreeable, pleasant.

Suavemente (soo-ä-vĕ-mĕn'tĕ), Sp. Suavemente (soo-ä-vĕ-men'tē), It. Suavita (soo-ä-vī-tä'), It. } Suavity, sweetness, delicacy.

Sub (sŭb), Lat. Under, below, beneath.

Subbass (soob'bäss), Ger. Underbass; an organ-register in the pedals, usually a double-stopped bass of 32- or 16-feet tone, though sometimes open wood-pipes of 16 feet, as at Haarlem; the groundbass.

Subbourdon. An organ-stop of 32-feet tone, with stopped pipes.

Subdominant. The fourth note of any scale or key.

Subitamente (soo-bī-tä-mĕn'tĕ), Subito (soo'bī-tō), It. } Suddenly, immediately, at once.

Subject. A melody or theme; a leading text or motivo.

Subject, counter. The counterpoint of the subject, which every voice in a fugue performs after giving out the subject.

Submediant. The sixth tone of the scale.

Suboctave. An organ-coupler producing the octave below.

Subprincipal. Underprincipal; that is, below the pedal diapason pitch; in German organs this is a double open bass stop of 32-feet scale.

Subsemitone. The semitone below the keyboard, the sharp seventh of any key.

Subsemitonium modi (soob-sĕm-ī-tō'nĭ-oom mō'dĭ), Lat. The leading note.

Subtonic. Under the tonic; the semitone immediately below the tonic.

Succentor (sook-sĕn'tŏr), Lat. A subchanter, a deputy of the precentor. A bass singer.

Sudden modulation. Modulation to a distant key, without any intermediate chord to prepare the ear.

Suffocato (soof-fō-kä' tō), It. Suffocated. Choked, as if with grief.

Sul (soo'l), It. Sul.

Suite (swēt), Fr. A series, a succession; une suite de pièces, a series of lessons, or pieces.

Suite (swēt), Fr. A series, a set; i. e., a series, or set, of pieces (suite de pièces). In the earlier part of the eighteenth century, and anterior to that time, a suite consisted in most cases of dances, to which, however, was often added a prelude as an introductory first piece. Other pieces than dances were also occasionally interspersed—for instance, in some of J. S. Bach's suites we find an air. As to the dances, they were artistically treated, differing from those intended to be danced to, both in form and style, and not unfrequently also in character. Bach's Suites Anglaises all open with a prelude, but his Suites Françaises are without such an introductory piece. The first of Bach's Suites Anglaises contains the following pieces: (1) Prelude; (2) Allemande; (3) Courante; (4) Sarabande; (5) Bourée; (6) Gigue. Instead of the bourée we find in others of the master's suites a gavotte, or a menuet, or a passepied. The allemande is generally the first of the dances; the order and selection of the other dances were less settled, but the courante and sarabande were very common as the second and third constituents, as was also the gigue as the last. Other dances to be met with in suites are the loure, anglaise, polonaise, pavane, etc. As a rule the pieces are all in the same key. Their number differed. In recent times composers have taken the suite again into favor. But the modern suite is more varied than the old; its constituents comprise not only dances of the past and present, but also characteristic pieces of all sorts, even fugues. It need hardly be added that the moderns do not, like their forefathers, adhere to unity of key.

Suivez (swē-vā), Fr. Follow, attend, pursue; the accompaniment must be accommodated to the singer or solo player.

Sujet (sü-zhā), Fr. A subject, melody, or theme.

Sul (sol), Sull' (sool), Sulla (sool'lä), It. } On, upon the.

Sul A. On the A string.

Sul D. On the D string.

Sulla mezza corda (sool'lä mĕt'sä kōr'dä), It. On the middle of the string.

Sulla tastiera (sool-lä täs-tī-ā'rä), It. Upon the keys, upon the fingerboard.

Sul ponticello (sool pŏn-tī-tshĕl'lō), It. On or near the bridge.

Sumara. A species of flute having two pipes, common in Turkey; the shorter pipe is used for playing airs, and the longer for a continued bass.

Summational tones. See Resultant tones.

Sumpunjah (soom-poon-yäh), Heb. The dulcimer of the ancients. It was a wind instrument made of reeds; by the Syrians called samboujah and by the Italians zampogna.

Sumsen (soom's'n), Ger. To hum.

Suo loco (soo'ō lō'kō), It. In its own or usual place.

Suonantina (soo-ō-nän-tē'nä), It. A short, easy sonata.

Suonare (soo-ō-nä'rĕ), It. To play upon an instrument.

Suonare le campane (soo-ō-nä'rĕ lĕ käm-pä'nĕ), It. To ring the bells.

Suonar sordamente (soo-ō-när' sor-dä-mĕn'tĕ), It. To play softly.

Suonata (soo-ō-nä'tä), It. A sonata.

Suoni (soo-ō'nĭ), It. pl. Sounds.

Suoni armonichi (soo-ō'nĭ är-mō'nĭ-kĭ), It. pl. Harmonic sounds.

Suono armonioso (soo-ō'nō är-mō-nĭ-ō'zō), It. Harmonious sounds.

Superano (soo-pĕr-ä'nō), Sp. Soprano.

Superdominant. The note in the scale next above the dominant.

Superfluous intervals. Those which are one semitone more than the perfect, or major, intervals. See Augmented intervals.

Superoctave. An organ-stop tuned two octaves, or a fifteenth, above the diapasons; also a coupler producing the octave above.

Supersus (soo-pĕr'soos), Lat. Name formerly given to trebles when their station was very high in the scale.

Supertonic. } The note
Supertonique (sü-pĕr-tônh-ēk'), Fr. } next above the tonic, or key-note; the second note of the scale.

Supplichevole (soop-plĭ-kä'vō-lĕ), } Supplichevolmente (soop-plĭ-kä-vōl-mĕn'tĕ) } It. In a supplicatory manner.

Sur (soor), It. } On, upon, over.
Sur (sür), Fr. }

Surdeline. The old Italian bagpipe, a large and rather complicated instrument consisting of many pipes and conduits for the conveyance of the wind, with keys for the opening of the holes by the pressure of the fingers, and inflated by means of bellows, which the performer blows with his arm at the same time that he fingers the pipe.

Sur la quatrième corde (sür lä kät-rĭ-ām kōrd), Fr. On the fourth string.

Sur la seconde corde (sür lä sä-kônhd kōrd), Fr. Upon the second string.

Sur una corda (soor oo'nä kōr'dä), It. } Upon Sur une corde (sür ünh kōrd), Fr. } one string.

Suspended cadence. See Interrupted Cadence.

Suspension. The clashing effect of a dissonant tone which having been a consonant tone in one chord is retained, suspended, after the beginning of the next following chord, in which it is dissonant. The dissonance presently subsides, or gives place to the consonant tone (generally one degree below), which it had displaced. This disappearance of the dissonance is called its resolution. The appearance of the proposed dissonant tone as one of the regular members of the previous chord is called its preparation.

Suspension, double. A suspension retaining two notes, and requiring a double preparation and resolution.

Suspension, single. A suspension retaining but one note, and requiring only a single preparation and resolution.

Suspension, triple. A suspension formed by suspending a dominant or diminished seventh on the tonic, mediant, or dominant, of the key.

Süss (süss), Ger. Sweetly.

Süssflöte (süss'flö'tĕ), Ger. In organs, the soft flute.

Sussurando (soos-soo-rän'dō), It. } Whisper-
Sussurante (soos-soo-rän'tĕ), } ing, murmuring.

Sussuration. A whispering; a soft, murmuring sound.

Sustained. Notes are said to be sustained when their sound is continued through their whole time or length. See Sostenuto.

Svegliato (svāl-yĭ-ä'tō), It. Brisk, lively, sprightly.

Svegliatojo (svĕl-yĭ-ä-tō'yō), It. An alarm bell.

Svelto (svĕl'tō), It. Free, light, easy.

Swell. A gradual increase of sound.

Swell organ. In organs having three rows of keys, the third, or upper, row controlling a number of pipes enclosed in a box, which may be gradually opened or shut, and thus the tone increased or diminished by degrees.

Swell pedal. That which raises the dampers from the strings or opens the swell-blinds of the organ.

Syllables, Guidonian. The syllables ut, re, mi, fa, sol, la, used by Guido for his system of tetrachords.

Symbal. See Cymbal.

Sympathetic strings. Strings which were formerly fastened under the fingerboard of the viola d'amore, beneath the bridge, and, being tuned to the strings above, vibrated with them and strengthened the tone.

Symphonia (sĭm-fō-nĭ-ä), Gr. Agreement of sounds. The name was applied at one time to a stringed instrument of the hurdygurdy variety. A symphony.

Symphonic. In the style, or manner, of a symphony; harmonious; agreeing in sound.

Symphonie (sănh-fō-nē), Fr. } A form of com-Symphonie (sĭm-fō-nē), Ger. } position for Symphony (sĭm fō-nĭ), Eng. } orchestra (somewhat enlarged), of an elevated and noble style. There is no settled order of movements in a symphony, but in general (with or without a slow introduction) the first movement is allegro, in the form of a sonata-piece; the second is a slow movement; the third a scherzo or other playful movement, and the fourth a finale, which is more often a sonata-piece. The variety of instruments in a modern orchestra affords the symphony unlimited opportunities for poetical and pleasing effects of tone color and contrast. The greatest masters of symphony are Beethoven, Schubert, Schumann, and Brahms.

The name symphony is applied in England to orchestral or other interludes and preludes of songs. In this sense Handel uses it in the "Messiah" as "Pastoral Symphony," which would now be called an intermezzo.

Symphonienseser (sĭm-fō-nĭ-ĕn-sĕ-sĕr), Ger. Symphonist; a composer of symphonies.

Symphonious. Harmonious; agreeing in sound.

Symphonische Dichtung (sĭm-fō'nĭ-shĕ dĭkh'-toong), Ger. A symphonic poem. An orchestral composition with a poetic basis (a program) and of a free form—the latter being determined by the subject, not by rule and custom. Liszt is the originator of the kind and the name. Before him Berlioz had written symphonies with a poetic basis and differing more or less from the orthodox compositions of that appellation. Nevertheless Liszt was an originator of more than the name, for his symphonic p ems are peculiar in various ways, especially in these two: their continuity (they are not broken up into separate divisions) and the extensive employment of transformation of themes (melodic, harmonic, and rhythmic, modification of themes for the purpose of changing their expression). This latter serves to give unity to the various constituents of the composition.

Symphonist. A composer of symphonies. In France the term symphonist is also applied to a composer of church-music.

Symposia. An epithet generally applicable to cheerful and convivial compositions, as catches, glees, rounds, etc.

Syncopata (sĭn-kō-pä'tä)
Syncopate (sĭn-kō-pä'tē), It.
Syncopato (sĭn-kō-pä'tō), } Syncopated.

Syncopation, Eng.
Syncope (sănh-kōp), Fr. } A rhythmic disturbance consisting essentially of concealing the true accent by the device of beginning a tone on the weak pulse or part of a pulse, and prolonging it across the strong pulse or part of a pulse, thus depriving the strong rhythmic place of its proper accent. The note so begun, and prolonged across a point where an accent would be expected, is said to be syncopated.

In pianoforte-music, when one hand has syncopation, the other generally has the true accent. Syncopated notes are accented, the accent being anticipated from the strong pulse across which they syncopate. There are a few examples, in modern music, of syncopating forms in the accompaniment where no accent is implied. (For instance in Schumann's "Warum.")

Syncoper (sănh-kō-pā), Fr.
Syncopiren (sĭn-kō-pē'r'n), Ger. } To syncopate.

Système (sĭs-tām), Fr. A system.

T

T. Abbreviation of Tempo; also of Tenor.

Taballó (tä-bäl'lō), It. A kettledrum.

Tabar (tä-bär), It. A small drum; a tabor.

Tablatura (täb-lä-too'rä), It.
Tablature (tä-blä-tür), Fr.
Tablature (täb'lä-tshūr), Eng.
Tabulatur (tä' boo-lä-toor), Ger. } A term formerly applied to the totality or general assemblage of the signs used in music; so that to understand the notes, clefs, and other necessary marks, and to be able to sing at sight, was to be skilled in the tablature. More particularly applied, however, to a curious notation for the lute, viols, and wind instruments invented between A. D. 1400 and 1500. It consisted of lines and bars, with signs in the spaces and above the staff. There were as many lines as strings upon the instrument noted. The lute had six frets, which the tablatura indicated by letters, a for open string, b for first fret, c for second, etc. The tabulature had these letters for all the stopping required, bars for measure, and signs of value for duration. The tablature for wind instruments was different, but upon similar principles, indicating the mechanism of performing the tones rather than the tones themselves.

Table d'harmonie (täbl d'är-mō-nē), Fr. A table or diagram of chords, intervals, etc.

Table d'instrument (täbl d'ănh-strü-mänh), Fr. The belly of an instrument.

Table songs. Songs for male voices formerly much in vogue in German glee clubs.

Tabor. A small drum, generally used to accompany the pipe or fife in dances. Probably a tambourine without jingles.

Taboret. A small tabor.

Tabourin (tä-boo-rănh), Fr. A tabor, or tambourine—a shallow drum with but one head.

Tabret. A kind of drum used by the ancient Hebrews.

Tacet (tä'sĕt), or, Tacent (tä-tsĕnt), Lat.
Tace (tä'tshĕ), It.
Taci (tä'tshĭ), It.
Taciasi (tä-tshĭ-ä'zĭ), It. } Be silent; meaning that certain instruments are not to play; as, violino tacet, the violin is not to play; oboe tacet, let the oboe be silent.

Tact (täkt), Ger. See Takt.

Tactus (täk'toos), Lat. In the ancient music the stroke of the hand by which the time was measured or beaten.

Tafelmusik (tä'fl-moo-sĭk'), Ger. Table-music; music sung at the table, as part-songs, glees, etc.

Taille (tä-ûh), Fr. The tenor part; the viola.

Taille de violon (tä-ûh dŭh vē-ō-lônh), Fr. The viola, or tenor violin.

Tailpiece. That piece of ebony to which the violin, viola, etc., are fastened.

Takt (täkt), Ger. Time, measure.

Taktart (täkt'ärt), Ger. Species of time, common or triple.

Taktfest (täkt'fĕst), Ger. Steadiness in keeping time.

Taktführer (täkt-füh-rĕr), Ger. A conductor; leader.

Taktieren (täk'tēr-ĕn), Ger. To direct in measure.

Taktlinie (täkt'lē-nĭ-ĕ), Taktstrich (täkt'strikh), Ger. } A bar-line; the lines which mark the bars.

Taktmässig (täkt'mä'sĭg), Ger. Conformable to the time.

Taktzeichen (täkt'tsī'kh'n), Ger. The figures, or signs, at the beginning of a piece, to show the time.

Talabalacco (tä-lä-bä-läk'kō), It. A species of Moorish drum.

Talon (tä-lŏnh), Fr. The heel of the bow; that part nearest the nut.

Tambour (tänh-boor), Fr. Drum; the great drum; also a drummer.

Tamboura. An ancient instrument of the guitar kind used in the East.

Tambour de basque (tänh-boor dŭh bäsk), Fr. A tabour, or tabor; a tambourine.

Tambouret (tänh-boo-rā), Fr. } A timbrel, a Tambourine, Eng. } small instrument of percussion, like the head of a drum, with little bells placed round its rim to increase the noise.

Tambourine (tänh-boo-rēn), Fr. A species of dance, accompanied by the tambourine; also a tambourine.

Tambourineur (tänh-boo-rē-nûr), Fr. Drummer, tambourine-player.

Tambour major. See Drum major.

Tambourello (täm-boo-rāl'lō), It. } A tam-Tambouretto (täm-boo-rāt'to), It. } bourine; a little drum.

Tambourone (täm-boo-rō'nĕ), It. The great drum.

Tamburaccio (täm-boo-rät'tshī-ō), It. A large old drum; a tabor.

Tamburino (täm-boo-rē'nō), It. A little drum; also a drummer.

Tamburo (täm-boo'rō), It. A drum.

Tamtam. An Indian instrument of percussion; a species of drum, or tambourine.

Tändelnd (tän'dĕlnd), Ger. In a playful manner.

Tanedor (tä-nĕ-thōr'), Sp. Player on a musical instrument.

Tangent (tän'ghĕnt), Ger. The jack of a harpsichord.

Tantino (tän-tē'nō), It. A little.

Tanto (tän'tō), It. So much; as much; allegro non tanto, not so quick, not too quick.

Tantum ergo (tän'toom ār'gō), Lat. A hymn sung at the Benediction in the Roman Catholic service.

Tänze (tän'tsĕ), Ger. pl. Dances.

Tänzer (tän'tsĕr), Ger. A dancer.

Tänzerin (tän'tsĕ-rĭn), Ger. A female dancer.

Tanzkunst (tänts'koonst), Ger. The art of dancing.

Tanzstück (tans-stük), Ger. A dance tune.

Tap. A drum-beat of a single note.

Tarabouk. A musical instrument used by the Turks, formed by drawing a parchment over the bottom of a large earthen vessel.

Tarantella (tär-rän-tĕl'lä), It. A swift, delirious sort of Italian dance in 6-8 time. The form has been adopted by many of the modern composers, as Liszt, Chopin, etc. So called because long regarded by the peasantry as a remedy for the bite of the tarantula spider.

Tardamente (tär-dä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Slowly.

Tardando (tär-dän'dō), It. Lingering, retarding the time.

Tardo (tär'dō), It. Tardy, slow.

Tartini's tones. The resultant or combination tones, which are formed when two notes are sounded together upon the violin. Tartini first observed them, and as they always represent the natural root of the tones which sound them, he made them serve him as guides to the correct stopping of double touches in the high positions.

Tastame (täs-tä-mĕ), It. } The keys or Tastatur (täs'tä-toor), Ger. } keyboard of a Tastatura (täs-tä-too'rä), Ger. } pianoforte, or-Tastiera (täs-tĭ-ā'rä), It. } gan, etc.

Taste. A sympathetic appreciation of the refined, intelligent, and noble in any art.

Taste (täs'tĕ), Ger. } The touch of any instru-Tasto (täs'tō), It. } ment; hence, also, a key, or thing, touched.

Tastenbrett (täs't'n-brĕt), Ger. Keyboard of a pianoforte, etc.

Tasto solo (täs'tō sō'lō), It. One key alone; in organ or pianoforte music this means a note without harmony, the bass notes over or under which it is written are not to be accompanied with chords.

Tatto (tä'tō), It. The touch.

Tattoo. The beat of a drum at night calling the soldiers to their quarters.

Teatro (tā-ä'trō), It. A theater, playhouse.

Teatro di gran cartello (tā-ä'trō dē grän kär-tĕl'lō), It. Lyric theater of the first rank.

Technic. That part of the art of playing, performing, or working which can be taught. Upon instruments the technic includes the application of the fingers, their expertness, and the means for making them expert, and the mechanism of producing tones of different qualities. In composition the technic includes all the practical principles, and expertness in applying them. With reference to piano-playing, the term technic was formerly restricted to finger-facility merely, whereas at present it applies to all parts of the mechanism of playing, including every sort of movement and the art of differentiating tones.

Technik (tĕkh'nĭk), Ger. Technic.

Technisch (tĕkh'nĭsh), Ger. Technical; this word is also used to indicate mechanical proficiency, as regards execution.

Tedesca (tĕ-dĕs'kä), It. } German; alla tedes-

Te Deum laudamus (tē dā'oom lou-dä'moos), Lat. We praise Thee; a canticle, or hymn of praise, often attributed to St. Ambrosius.

Telltale. A movable piece of metal, bone, or ivory, attached to an organ, indicating by its position the amount of wind supplied by the bellows.

Tema (tä'mä), It. A theme or subject; a melody.

Temperament. The system of compromise, in accordance with which the octave is divided into twelve equal intervals (sometimes called semitones) for the purpose of simplifying the music and permitting many relations of chords which would not be possible upon instruments producing fifths and thirds in perfectly accurate accoustical relation. In order to play in perfect tune upwards of fifty intervals in the octave would be necessary, and many tones which are identical upon the tempered instrument would then be found different and incapable of substitution for each other. An equal temperament is one in which the imperfections are equally distributed; an unequal temperament is one in which a few keys are nearly perfect, while all others are very bad. In correct temperaments the fifths are a twelfth of a comma flat; the fourths the same amount too sharp; the major third is a fourth of a comma too sharp, and so on. All intervals are incorrect except the octave and unison. But the differences are so small that, except in slow chords, the ear is quite well satisfied.

Temperatur (tĕm'pĕ-rä-toor'), Ger. Temperament.

Tempestosamente (tĕm'pĕs-tō-zä-mĕn'tĕ), It. Furiously, impetuously.

Tempestoso (tĕm-pĕs-tō'zō), It. Tempestuous, stormy, boisterous.

Tempete (tänh-pāt'), Fr. A boisterous dance in 2-4 time.

Tempo (tĕm'pō), It. Time, rate of movement. Tempo is classified from very slow to moderate, fast, and very fast, the grades being the following: Grave, lento, adagio, andante, moderato, allegro, presto, prestissimo, the latter being as fast as possible; a tempo, in time.

Tempo alla breve (tĕm'pō äl'lä brā'vĕ), It. In a quick species of common time.

Tempo a piacere (tĕm'pō ä pē-ä-tshā'rĕ), It. The time at pleasure.

Tempobezeichnung (tĕm'pō-bĕ-tsīkh'noong), Ger. Measure-marking. The signs indicating the variety of measure.

Tempo comodo (tĕm'pō kō-mō'dō), It. Convenient time; an easy, moderate degree of movement.

Tempo di ballo (tĕm'pō dē bäl'lō), It. In dance time; rather quick.

Tempo di bolero (tĕm'pō dē bō-lĕ'rō), It. In time of a bolero.

Tempo di cappella (tĕm'pō dē käp-pĕl'lä), It. In the church time. See Alla breve.

Tempo di gavotta (tĕm'pō dē gä-vōt'tä), It. In the time of a gavot.

Tempo di marcia (tĕm'pō dē mär'tshĭ-ä), It. In the time of a march.

Tempo di menuetto (tĕm'pō dē mĕ-noo-ĕt'tō), It. In the time of a minuet.

Tempo di polacca (tĕm'pō dē pō-läk'kä), It. In the time of a polacca.

Toccata (tōk-kä'tä), It. A purely instrumental form, of which we hear already in the latter part of the sixteenth century. The name is derived from tocare, to touch, to play. In its older form the toccata is a prelude consisting of a few chords and colorature, or a something between a prelude and a fantasia, made up of runs, arpeggios, and short aperçus. A characteristic of the toccata is that it has the appearance of an improvisation. Although very different, the modern toccata shares yet to a greater or less extent the chief characteristics of its predecessor. It is generally constructed out of a nimble figure which is kept up throughout; melodic effusions are excluded, and technical display and rhythmical movement are mainly aimed at. In short, the modern toccata partakes of the nature of the prelude, study, and improvisation.

Tonic section. A section closing on the common chord of the tonic.

Tonic solfa. A system of teaching music (principally vocal) which has attained wide success in England. It consists essentially of two elements: First an analysis of musical effects, in which everything is referred to relations in key. Hence the training addresses itself to the correct apprehension of the relations of tones to a central tone, the tonic, or, as they say it, "tones in key." This part of the work has been carried out in a highly ingenious manner in a multitude of textbooks and by thousands of well-trained teachers, and has exerted an appreciable influence upon the growth of musical taste by educating musical perceptions in people who, without this training, would rarely have arrived at them. The second element in the system is a notation, consisting of the letters indicating the solfa, d for do, r for re, m for mi, f for fa, etc., changing si to te for seven, in order to remove the ambiguity of s for sol and s for si. These initials take the place of notes, and are all written upon the same plane. Without additional marks they are to indicate the current octave. When a higher or lower octave is desired an index mark is written at the top or bottom of the initial letter. Time-values are indicated by means of bars and time-spaces, of which there are as many as the measure requires. When one initial occupies a time-space, the tone extends one beat; when two initials occupy the space, the tones are half-beats. When a tone is prolonged through a second time-space a dash is written in the second time-space, which means prolong it. Rests are indicated by vacant time-spaces. Example:

This notation, being simplicity itself, and equally valid for all keys, has proven extremely valuable in elementary instruction and for children. It also has uses for advanced students as a generalized statement of relations in key. The tonic solfa was invented by Miss Glover, of Norwich, and greatly perfected by the late Rev. John Curwen, and his son, John Spencer Curwen, who is the present head of the movement.

Triad. A "three-er." A chord of three tones, consisting of a root, its third and fifth. According to recent theorists all triads are either of the natural harmony triad, which corresponds with the partial tones of a fundamental, having a major third and a perfect fifth, and imitations of it upon other degrees of the scale, where many strange intervals arise. For instance, in the major scale the triads of the tonic, fourth, and fifth are natural and complete. Those of the second, third, and sixth are minor, having a minor third and a perfect fifth, and that of the seventh degree having a minor third and diminished fifth, is called diminished. In the minor scale several other triads arise: Upon the first and fourth, minor triads; upon the second and seventh, diminished triads; upon the third an augmented triad, and upon the fifth and sixth, major triads.

A triad is said to be inverted when its bass is not the root but one of the other members of the chord. Hence two inversions, the first, in which the third of the triad is bass, and the second, in which the fifth of the triad is bass.

The root of a triad is its greatest common measure. In other words the root of the natural triad is exactly the natural bass tone which contains the third and fifth among its partials. In all other varieties of triad contradictory elements are present, at least two roots being represented. The absence of easy agreement is the source of the appealing effect in minor and all other less agreeable triads.

The proper fundamentals of any two tones sounding together are the combination tones generated in the low bass. Thus, C and E♭ together generate A♭ in the bass; C and E or E and C generate C; G and B♭ generate E♭. In general, minor thirds generate roots a twelfth below the upper of the two notes; major thirds generate the octave below the lower tone. Every two tones sounding together above treble clef G generate combination tones, which, when the tones are sounded loudly upon an organ in good tune, can always be heard.

Triad, augmented. Consisting of a root, major third, and augmented fifth. Its natural place is upon the third degree of the minor scale.

Valves. Contrivances for admitting or shutting off wind. Found in organs, reed organs, and especially in brass instruments, where they serve to admit air or cut it off from what are called "crooks," or additional lengths of tube. Horns and instruments of this class have three valves, one lowering the pitch a half step, one a full step, and one a step and a half. They may be used separately or together. Each of these valves opens a tube affording a complete set of harmonics like that of the natural tube, only as much lower as the tube affords additional length. Hence, by means of them a complete chromatic scale may be obtained, and many notes can be obtained in either one of several ways.

Valve trumpets, whose tones are varied by the use of valves.

Variamente (vä-rē-ä-mĕn'tē), Variamento (vä-rē-ä-mĕn'tō), It. In a varied, free style of performance or execution.

Variationen (fä-rē-ä-tsē-o'nĕn), Ger. pl. Variazioni (vä-rē-ä-tsē-ō'nē), It. pl. Variations.

Variations. A musical form consisting of characteristic treatments of a musical theme or air. The diversification of a theme in thematic work differs from that in variation work in the following particulars: In thematic work (sonata and fugue) the rhythm of the theme is not varied, but the harmony and melodic outline are; in variation writing there are two principles of proceeding. In the older one, called formal variations, the harmony of the theme is not varied, or if varied, only so much as to transfer it from major to minor mode; but the melody is amplified and ornamented to any extent. In the more modern method of writing, called character variations, the theme is sometimes varied in harmony to a very unusual degree. The limits of this method of diversification rest upon the fact that a musical theme consists of three elements, its melody, harmony, and rhythm. Its complete identity resides in the three combined, but either one or even two of these may be modified and still the theme contain enough of its original character to permit us to refer the modified forms to the original as their source. In thematic transformation the rhythm, being the ruling element, is rarely changed; in variation writing the melody (and its harmony) being the ruling element, these are less changed than the rhythm, and most variations are essentially amplifications of an idea rather than transformations. Of character variations those in the sonata of Beethoven, Opus 26, are strong examples; of formal variations those in the second movement of Beethoven's Sonata Appassionata are notable.
